HONOR MEMORY OF PHYSICIAN

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 22.—Few anniversaries that have marked the year now nearing its close have been of wider interest than the 175th anniversary of the birth of Dr. Benjamin Rush, which is to be observed in this city day after tomorrow. To all lovers of America the anniversary is of interest, because Dr. Rush was an ardent patriot and one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

But it is in medical circles that the anniversary is of particular interest, for Dr. Rush was one of the greatest of the early leaders of the medical profession in America. During the revolution he was physician-general in the American army. For 29 years he was surgeon to the Pennsylvania hospital, and for three years port physician to Philadelphia. The first dispensary in the United States was established by him.

Few physicians have been more honored than Benjamin Rush, or have done more to add luster to their profession. It was said of him that "he established more principles, and added more facts to the science of medicine, than all who preceded him" in America. He taught more clearly than any other physician of his day to distinguish diseases and their effects, gave great impulse to the study of medicine in America, and made Philadelphia the center of that science at the beginning of the last century.

Dr. Rush had one of the most active, and at times stormy careers. His greatest fame was achieved during the terrible epidemic of yellow fever in 1793, and the service that he rendered then was incalculable. He had bold views of medical practice, and sustained them against bitter opposition. He was convinced that yellow fever was not contagious, and he was the first to proclaim that the disease is indigenous, or produced naturally in a country or climate.

In a manuscript of a doctor of Virginia, who had observed an epidemic of yellow fever 50 years before, a new method for the cure of the disease was explained, and Dr. Rush, adopting this, was able to effect many cures. The method involved the use of purgatives, and the operating of blood letting, of which Dr. Rush was an ardent supporter. For his departures from the usual practice he was criticized severely, and was attacked so fiercely in print by one person that he sued for damages and was awarded $5000, which he at once distributed among the poor.

Brunswick Wins Again

An unbiased neutral committee selected to purchase a phonograph for the Klamath County Infirmary chose the BRUNSWICK in competition with a number of standard phonographs. Brunswick is the Original All-Record Phonograph without attachments and part of its fame is due to this great innovation.

Until the coming of this noted instrument, most phonograph owners had to be content with a one-record instrument. Brunswick made this idea out of date.

There have been many attempts to equal The Brunswick, but devices and attachments never bring the desired results.

The Ultona is part of The Brunswick, in-built. And it plays every record at its best.

Another exclusive feature is the Brunswick Tone Amplifier, built entirely of wood. It has no cast metal throat, as is usual.

BRUNSWICK Phonographs and Records

This scientific tone amplifier, built according to acoustic laws, gives truer, richer tone. It reveals hitherto lost shadings.

Hear The Brunswick before you buy a phonograph. Note its unequaled tone, its superb cabinet work, its many betterments.

You will hardly believe all the good things they say about The Brunswick until you, yourself, hear it. Come in today.
