

PROFESSOR WORKING ON NEW PROCESS OF DISTILLING WOOD

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Dec. 24.—A new process of wood distillation is being achieved by Professor O. F. Stafford, head of the department of chemistry of the University of Oregon, who is now on leave of absence at Kingsport, Tennessee. The process is destructive, and wood in the retort is decomposed forming carbon from which wood alcohol, acetone, acetic acid and by special process shinglestain and turpentine are made. Much heat has always been lost by cooling the wood and then reheating it while in the retort. Professor Stafford's process is continuous. His new plant has been running for 87 hours, using one cord an hour of waste wood. Plans are now underway for a commercial plant that will use 100 cords of 5-foot wood a day.

Yuletide Hymn
Getting ready for Christmas!
Go fetch dad's purple socks
Also his pink suspenders
In the pretty tinsel box

Of course, he got 'em last year—
But father's memory's poor,
And he'll be as glad to get 'em
As he ever was before!

Too Much Noise
Bill Lorenz, the plumber and his assistant, got a hurry call from the lunch counter side of the Rex cafe yesterday noon, to fix some leaky plumbing. Bill bored a hole through the floor and the assistant crawled beneath the building to make connections with the pipes beneath. Bill shouted directions through the hole, but failed to get results.
"Aw, why don't you pay some attention to what I'm yellin'!" he screamed, his lung power nearly exhausted.
"I can't hear a word you say," returned the assistant. "Wait till them guys at the counter finish their soup."

Modest to a Fault
O. D. Burke, president of the Klamath state bank, stands on no false dignity. Consequently the sidewalks in front of the bank are always free from snow. The other morning, however, when the bank head came to work, he was agreeably surprised to find someone had beaten him to his task. Afraid he might overlook true merit, he decided to make the rounds and praise each employee individually for his or her industry. Otherwise, thought he, modesty may prevent the worker from receiving a just desert.
Privately he expressed his appreciation to each employee, and much to his amazement, not one declined the thanks or denied the industry.
Yesterday morning, Mr. Burke, was again wielding broom and shovel on the sidewalk, when a burly passer-by accosted him with—"Shovellin' 'em off yourself today."
"Yes," said the banker. "Why?"
"Well, you've beat me out of a half dollar. I earned a half cleaning 'em yesterday."

Little Question Answered
"Little question for today: What do you suppose Woodrow Wilson will tell congress next month in his farewell address?"—Boston Globe. Nobody knows, but we know he can't tell anything that will affect the judgment of the people of the United States rendered as to Mr. Wilson and his politics on November 2nd.

WOOD

DRY SLAB costs you less than other woods. We can deliver SLABS more promptly than blocks.

All our wood is dry and well seasoned.

Deliveries are difficult at this season of the year and prices are necessarily higher, but the net profit to us is less, so do not blame the wood man for the higher prices.
