WEDNESDAY BARGAIN DAY

Idea that prompted the Bargain Day Page. The merchants whose advertisements appear here are offering one article at a special price. No two are offering the same article. The object is to get you to visit their stores and while there learn that the prices they are charging are no higher than what you have been paying the out-of-town merchant.

We hope to make Wednesday the Big Market Day of Klamath Falls. We hope to see the people of the county make out a list of what they want and get the prices from their home merchant. We have no fear of the result. We know that the money that has been going elsewhere will remain in Klamath county for its up-building and you will be getting value received for the money you spend.

SWATS RACE SUICIDE; WINS BIG WARDROBE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3.—For many years Representative Small of North Carolina has by agreement been presenting to R. C. Bland, a Carolina farmer and one of his constituents, a suit of clothes for each additional child in his family. Having presented thirteen suits, and being recently notified to send the fourteenth, Representative Small has informed Bland that the contract will be "off" with Mr. Small's retirement from congress on March 3.

Small and Bland made their compact a number of years ago when Small was making a campaign speech at Robersonville, near here. Bland then had twenty children; he now has thirty-four.

Twenty-six of the thirty-four children are living, and the present Mrs. Bland, Bland's second wife, is the mother of nineteen, nine of whom were born during the last ten years, including one set of twins. Eighteen children still live at home, but Mrs. Bland declares she gets lonesome sometimes "because so many have gone away."

Mr. and Mrs. Bland recently had a group photograph taken of the family still remaining on the Bland farm. While the photographer was working a buzzard cast its shadow on the ground. Bland was asked if he was superstitious.

"No," he said, "I'm not afraid of buzzards, but at first I thought the blame thing was a stork."

In calling the children together for the photograph, Bland simply cupped his hands and in a stentorian voice cried: "Children." Results were immediate. Children appeared from every direction. Some of the "children" were grown men and women; others were barely able to toddle forth, and one was still being carried in arms.

Bland says it is no more trouble to bring up fifty children than it is to raise ten.

"After you pass ten," he says, "the older ones are a big help."

The children were not unusually noisy, Bland said, although "they made considerable racket when fourteen were taken down together with whooping cough." The bland grocery bill is equivalent to $150 a week, although Bland produces a large part of his food. On one occasion he says he spent most of one night computing the cost of keeping his family comfortable, but that the figures reached such alarming proportions he gave up the job.

EXPERIMENT IN FERTILIZING

The best fertilizers to use on various grades of soil to be found in the state of Oregon have been shown as the result of a series of experiments conducted by the soils department of the state agricultural college. Experiments have been conducted with 16 representative soils and the trials show the effects of different fertilizers and the elements in which the soil is most deficient.

The trial on the Hesseline tract, near Klamath Falls, are classed as Yakima sandy loam. The surface soil is a light brown sandy loam, with a darker subsurface. This experiment was begun in 1920 with sulphur super-phosphate, rock phosphate, gypsum and muriate of potash. Potatoes are being used as the experiment crop. Where muriate of potash was used a definite increase in yield over the check plot was noted. The other fertilizers gave no increase. Alfalfa on this type of soil has given profitable increase from this treatment.

The Nelson tract near Klamath Falls is clay loam soils. This experiment was begun in 1917 and shows that where sulphur was used the yield was increased by two tons the fourth season after treatment. Eighty pounds of sulphur has made about eight tons increase in yield during a four-year period. Sulphur doubled the yield of alfalfa in Goose Lake valley the last five years.

The McCormick tract is a shallow pea soil, formed from decomposition of tules and swamp grass, in the swamp and shallow lake regions of Klamath county. This experiment was begun last year and no appreciable increase in alfalfa and timothy in yield was noticed the first year, except with sulphate of potash, which showed a small increase over the check plot.—Portland Oregonian.
