Strong Organization Backs First National

and ability with which Mr. Rogers has conducted the institution with which he has been identified has entitled him to recognition in the new organization, and it is understood that he is slated for the position of first vice president in the First National bank and will be so elected at the annual meeting to be held January 11th.

ANDREW COLLIER has been identified with the First National bank for a number of years as vice president and director, as succeeding the E. P. McCormack interests. Mr. Collier is recognized as being one of the most progressive of the younger generation of Klamath Falls, and is known for his sterling qualities and rare judgment. He is identified with other local industries of Klamath Falls, as president of the Klamath Falls Ice company. He is a native of Oregon, a graduate from the University of Oregon, and is a local supporter and staunch defendant of his native state.

CHARLES L. MOORE has been identified with the First National bank for many years, having taken the place of his father, Charles S. Moore, one of the best known men of Oregon, and has inherited the conservative and progressive qualities of the Moore family. Mr. Moore represents large interests in Klamath county. He is from one of the wealthiest families of Southern Oregon, and represents one of the most influential elements of the country.

J. O. GOLDTHWAITE recently became connected with the First National bank as one of the directors. He is looked upon as one of the most progressive lumbermen in the district, and the First National bank realizing that lumber is one of the large industries of the county, thought it advisable to have a man upon the board who is familiar with this industry. Mr. Goldthwaite is president of the Modoc Lumber company, one of the most successful lumber manufacturing concerns in the country. Outside of the Weyerhaeuser Lumber company he is probably the largest timber owner in Southern Oregon. Mr. J. O. Goldthwaite was born and raised in Massachusetts, is a graduate of Harvard and received his early business education in the largest textile mills in the world, the O. & T. company. His father and grandfather not only being interested in the manufacture of textiles, were also identified with some of the largest banking institutions of the New England states. Furthermore, Mr. Goldthwaite received a sound foundation in manufacturing industries by being connected with the Olmsted Bangs company, one of the largest bond houses of the world. Later in life he moved into Oregon and successfully demonstrated his early training by being identified with several enterprises in Oregon and Idaho, which later lead to his location in Klamath county and the launching of the Modoc Lumber company, whose mill run amounted to 35,000,000 feet, the second largest producing mill in the county in 1920. Klamath county is again indeed fortunate in having a man of Mr. Goldthwaite's caliber located here. His family connections represent some of the largest property owners and financial interests of the country. He is directly connected with the Armour family of Chicago, one of the largest packing interests of the world. It is hoped and expected that this large aggregation of capital will ultimately be of interest in this section.

FRED SCHALLOCK is one of the members of the Ewauna Box company, which is one of the leading box manufacturing concerns on the Pacific coast. His business acumen and judgment has played a large part in placing his company in its present strong condition. Klamath Falls is proud of the Ewauna Box company, it having been one of the first manufacturing concerns financed by local capital, and has met with unqualified success. The people of Klamath Falls look upon it with a large degree of local pride. Mr. C. H. Daggett, as well as Mr. Schallock, is a stockholder in the First National bank. Mr. Daggett has demonstrated his remarkable administrative capacity with the Ewauna Box company, and the officers of the First National bank feel gratified that he has associated himself with the bank. Both Mr. Daggett and Mr. Schallock have had considerable experience in the banking business, both having been instrumental in the organization of the American bank and Trust company. Both of these gentlemen devoted their entire time to the banking business for about two years, and with their re-entry into banking business they bring valuable experience.

E. W. VANNICE, proprietor of the Golden Rule store, brings many years experience in mercantile lines to the directorate; a man of rare judgment and exceptional mercantile ability, proprietor of one of the largest mercantile establishments of Southern Oregon, and recognized as one of the successful business men of the county. He has been for many years interested in the mercantile business, and is considered one of the most conservative and successful merchants of Klamath county. Only his many friends know of his sterling worth and his never failing tendencies to contribute to worthy charities.

H. N. MOE, owner of the Woman's Store, adds great weight to the directorate. Mr. Moe in his five years of residence here has not only capably demonstrated his ability as a merchant, but has also acquired an extensive farm which he has successfully operated. His entrance into the banking field is regarded as an evidence of the liberal policy of the First National bank toward the agricultural interest of the county. His association will prove a valuable factor in formulating and carrying out the agricultural policy of the institution.

CHAS. F. STONE—In adding the name of Chas. F. Stone to the board of directors of the First National bank of Klamath Falls, Oregon, there is enlisted one of the most prominent attorneys in the state of Oregon. Mr. Stone has been identified with the banking business of Klamath Falls for many years, and it is realized that his attainments will add not only unquestionable legal value, but will also bring great banking experience.

Farm Center to Launch Campaigns; Mt. Laki Social

Roy Nelson and Charles Tower, assisted by L. A. West, director of livestock work for the county farm bureau, have completed details for Worden-Kenó-Plevna district's campaign to replace scrub sires with thoroughbreds during the coming year, a part of the general plan backed by the farm bureau and encouraged by the offer of purebred stock as prizes by local banks.

They have also completed plans for a membership drive in their district, and both campaigns will be started at once.

Mt. Laki Enthusiastic
At Mt. Laki on January 15 the farm bureau center plans to hold an entertainment and social evening, the purpose being to stimulate farm bureau spirit and enthusiasm in the neighborhood. There will be a program and refreshments.
