THURSDAY, JANUARY 13, 1921.

HAVE NO FEAR.

No other community in the world would have gone through that which this city experienced yesterday and accept it so philosophically. Not a ripple of excitement was in evidence and supreme confidence in the success of the First State and Savings bank to come out of its difficulties was to be found on every hand.

The president of the bank, Captain Siemens, will be home tonight and will, no doubt, within a day or two have a statement to make that will clarify the situation and put the public in possession of all the facts they are entitled to know.

WOULD REVISE SCHOOL SYSTEM OF CALIFORNIA

(By Associated Press) SACRAMENTO, Cal., Jan. 13.—Five or six miles and two constitutional amendments designed to put into effect the reorganization of the California educational system recommended by a joint legislative committee appointed at the close of the 1919 session, will be placed before the present legislature, according to Senator Jones of San Jose.

The plan is to create a state department of education that would include all education institutions, from the state university to the elementary schools, and would take over educational functions now performed by various state agencies.

A state board of education would have supervision of all educational matters and the superintendent of public instruction would be made an appointive officer. Similar action is contemplated in counties, the county superintendent of schools being appointed rather than elected.

While the University of California's board of regents would come into the department, according to Senator Jones, its functions would not be disturbed.

The plan contemplates raising of state normal schools to the status of colleges for teacher training so that the standard of teachers for elementary schools may be made higher. Regional junior colleges would be set up through the proposed system, thus relieving congestion at the University of California's central institution at Berkeley.

Under the state department proposed would be county educational units that would take over and combine many of the functions now performed by school districts.

Jones claims for his plan the ap-

LIMELIGHT

By Edmund Vance Cook.

The resolute fireman who dared the blaze And saved the child on the seventh floor.

Right well he deserved our bursts of praise, And who should merit them more?

But for a score of years his good wife strove And fought the fire in the kitchen stove;

Three times each day she saved her brood By the wholesome grace of well cooked food.

Yet across her bosom, I dare aver, You'll find no medallions hung on her.

The clear-minded mayor faced the mob,

The mob which threatened and cried and cursed,

And hurrah for the man who does his job

Through all of its best and worst!

But the mayor's man has a swart-hued face

And is counted one of the menial race,

And year after year he suffers the slight

Of constricted caste and an outraged right.

For a man may be martyred of staves and spears,

Or be martyred by inches all his years.

The halfback, pride of the sideline hosts,

In the last half breath of a desperate day,

He carried the ball behind the posts,

And they tell of it still today:

While a gnarled old father devoured the news,

Of his boy's success, as he cobbled shoes,

And the mist in his eyes subdued the fire

Of a mean, hard life of suppressed desire.

Well, service for service and game for game,

Which of the two deserves acclaim?

HELP!

CONFIDENCE IN SIEMENS UNIQUE

No new developments were reported today in connection with the closing of the First State & Savings bank yesterday on orders of the state superintendent of banking.

Rumors are rife on every hand, as usual in such situations, but they add nothing to the story. Level-headed business men, depositors of the institution, are apparently not worrying.

Capt. J. W. Siemens, president of the bank is expected to return tonight from Portland.

The situation contains many unique features. Primarily, it is an extraordinary thing to close the doors of a solvent bank to protect its loyal depositors from the result of a shaken confidence on the part of the timid minority who participated in the run that lowered the reserves to the danger point.

But more unique than that is the attitude of the community toward

Captain Siemens, an attitude of unswerving faith that the bank will pay dollar for dollar on every debt it owes. Those on the inside know of course that it is true that the bank is solvent and will pay to the last cent, but the sentiment is so general that with many it can have no basis of actual knowledge.
