THE MONDALE

Mr. Carney has been discharged by Donald Naughton's father, William Naughton, for vicious practices on the Hard Rock men engaged in his camp. By holding the threat of discharge over the heads of the laborers he had compelled them to cash their pay checks at his saloon. The result was that the men left the major part of their earnings in Carney's pockets.

Carney imported a number of thugs with Austrian Joe as their leader when he found that orders had been passed at the construction camp by Don Naughton to the effect that no more money of his force should spin over the bar of the Gem saloon. No sooner did this force of thugs get on the job at the camp than they inspired a strike for higher wages. Denied their unjust demand they quit. On being ordered from the premises, Austrian Joe and a companion apparently left, but in reality slipped out of sight to do what mischief they could.

Naughton, Jr., and two foremen were drilling rock. They had timed their fuse and paid out their wire. The man who was to set off the explosion was caught by Austrian Joe and his pal who overcame him and promptly set off the dynamite. Were it not for the miraculous intervention of Shiela Dolan, daughter of the foreman Naughton and his companions would have been blown into sternity.

"The Hard Rock Breed" is the name of this shoulder-to-shoulder story of man to man and give-and-take which will be shown at the Mondale theatre tonight and Wednesday.

THE STAR

Every man has his double somewhere. They may be thousands of miles apart, but it is quite possible that the long arm of coincidence may some day stretch its length and bring them together.

Such a case occurs in "The Man Who Lost Himself," a Seiznick picture, starring William Faversham, which will be shown at the Star theatre tonight.

When Victor Jones, of Philadelphia, and the Earl of Rochester met in a London hotel, they were exactly alike physically, but in character, in soul, in all that contributes vitally to the make-up of men, they were as far apart as the poles. One was dissolute, thoughtless, a weakling; the other—poor in purse—was rich in character, splendid, courageous.

The Earl saw in Jones an easy escape from the accumulation of entanglements—marital, financial, and social—that were making life unbearable for him. So it happened that Jones was Jones one night, and the next morning he was the Earl of Rochester, with all of the Earl's relatives to face and all of the Earl's troubles to conquer.

THE LIBERTY

"All's fair in love," decided Paul Blythe when he stole his best friend's best girl. But he hoped his friend would never find out about it, so he took his fascinating little bride to live in another city. Presently, who should appear, quite friendly and cheerful, but the old friend, come to make a visit. Then the complications started. Husband distracted, shuts friend up in the bathroom till he can get wife out of the way. She, poor girl, wonders why she is being bundled off with husband's partner to her mother's for a visit, when she had been expecting the old lady the very next day! So she refuses to be escorted sedately home to mother, and wheedles friend partner to take her to the carnival instead. Next day she returns home, having discovered, by a chance meeting at the fete, husband's duplicity in winning her away from her first sweetheart. Husband must be punished, she decides. He is. But before he is reduced to a proper spirit of repentance you will be reduced to a state bordering on exhaustion from laughing. "Her Beloved Villain" is French farce at its highest peak of wit and fun. At the Liberty tonight.

The Liberty theatre announces as the featured attraction for Wednesday "The Broken Gate," starring Besse Barriscale. This is the first appearance of the popular star under the management of the J. L. Frothingham productions released through W. W. Hodgkinson, and it is said to represent best work of her eminently successful career.

CONCERT

at the

SCANDINAVIAN HALL

THURSDAY, JANUARY 27th

Under the auspices of the MUSICAL STUDY CLUB

Here is what some of the music critics think of Mr. Godowsky's playing:

New York Tribune—The rhythmical crispness and grace of his reproduction of the old music and its exquisite beauty of melodic line and tone could scarce be overpraised.

New York Herald—He gave an exhibition of piano playing that will long be remembered. So far as technical difficulties are concerned they seem not to exist at all for Mr. Godowsky. His runs are of amazing clarity, whether they be simple scales, run in thirds or octaves. They fairly purr from his finger tips. Impressive poise and clearness marked his work throughout as well as virility. The enthusiasm of the audience grew with each number and it surrounded the platform after the regular program, and compelled encores. Mr. Godowsky is a phenomenal pianist.

Boston Evening Transcript—Beyond question, Mr. Godowsky is the master-technician of the pianoforte in our immediate time. Seemingly there is nothing in the whole range of technical intricacy, execution, or pure feat that composers have invented or imagined for piano and pianist that Mr. Godowsky cannot accomplish with the utmost precision and ease.

Washington Post—Godowsky is indeed master of technique, his facility and clarity of tone, especially in his soft passages, are marvelous. And, besides, he has a great deal to say in his playing, and he says it. Rarely does one hear such beauty of tone—it is vocal singing, liquid—and the values he gives to the different voices are a revelation in harmonic effects. Especially delightful was the rich work of the left hand.

Mr. Godowsky makes records exclusively for Brunswick.
