

RICHEST U. S. WOMAN?

MRS. F. W. WOOLWORTH
One of the richest women in the United States is Mrs. F. W. Woolworth of New York, widow of the 6-and-10-cent store magnate, who died recently, leaving her a fortune of $37,305,333. Some authorities on fortune say no other American woman has a fortune so large.

Suspended Prison Paper to Be Revived

"Lend a Hand," the Oregon state prison magazine, has been revived and this time is in the field to stay, announces T. S. Dietrich, 569 Everett street, Portland, chairman of the subscription committee. Commercial clubs, churches, fraternal organizations and individuals throughout the state are backing the publication with subscriptions. The price per year is one dollar. Any one interested in prison methods and prison reform may secure a year's subscription by addressing Mr. Dietrich.

The beneficial effect of the magazine upon the prison inmates is voiced for by Warden Compton and Governor Olcott says regarding the work of the publication prior to suspension: "I think it had splendid results, both inside the walls and in bringing about a clearer understanding of prison conditions to people outside."

OVERSEAS MAN COMES HERE TO RESIDE.

Walter A. Dreher, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Dreher of this city, has arrived here from Chicago where he has been making his home, and has accepted a position with Davenport's Jewelry store, at 123 South Sixth street. Mr. Dreher is an expert watchmaker, jeweler, and engraver, and is also an optician. More than all this, he is an overseas man, having seen a year's service in the trenches as a member of Company B, 311th Infantry. He brought with him his bride of three weeks, and intends to reside here permanently.

WEATHER REPORT.

OREGON—Tuesday, rain in the west portion, rain or snow in the southeast portion, warmer tonight in the east portion.

At the Theaters

THE STAR.

The popularity of Eugene O'Brien grows apace with each succeeding production, and it is expected that his new Selznick Picture, "The Wonderful Chance," which will be shown at the Star theatre next Tuesday will delight the many fans who have long considered this star their favorite screen player.

In "The Wonderful Chance," O'Brien is seen as "Swagger" Barlow, a gentleman crook, a character that is somewhat reminiscent of Jimmy Valentine, although this H. H. Van Loan story is along entirely different lines.

The picture opens with Barlow being released from Sing Sing and resolved to go straight. To save the life of a pal he tackles on more "job." He gets away with it, but is practically forced into another adventure which to him appears to be "the wonderful chance." Just what the chance is and what it developed forms the basis of the plot of one of the best pictures Eugene O'Brien has ever had.

In the cast will be found such prominent players as Martha Mansfield, Ida Darling, Warren Cook, Joe Flanagan, Tom Blake and others. George Archambaud directed.

How to Lose Your Soul!

You can lose your soul dancing the newest dance. In fact, if you don't lose your soul you can't dance it. That's the point of the thing, according to Miss Ingeborg La Cour-forup, Danish dancer, seen here introducing the latest European school of dancing, called "expressionistic." She wears a horrifying mask. "Each mask," she explains, "has its own soul. In the dance the artist's soul flees and the mask-soul takes possession." She's in Chicago now.
