The Office Cat

BY JUNIUS

Whoa, Hanner. She holds her age well. Does Hannah Ann Squeers, The neighbors do tell She's been thirty for years.

A crusty old bachelor in Saginaw says that there are one hundred reasons for divorce. One is marriage; the other ninety-nine don't count.

No Curiosity "Most women have a great deal of curiosity," said the husband. "I haven't a bit," replied his wife.

The fellow who thinks that the whole world is against him; never seems to realize that possibly the world doesn't even know he is around.

The Bargain Seeker. Bloomington (Ind) Star. A man from Gosport called on Squire Hartsock yesterday and asked him what he would charge to perform a marriage ceremony. The squire told him $1, and the man said that he could get the match solemnized over at Quincy for fifty cents (50c) and a prayer thrown in.

Yer Right We heard a local minister say the other day that if you put a barbed wire fence on each side of it you couldn't keep some men in the straight and narrow path.

A Confession By Us, Ourselves. In the first place, Mrs. Colyum had ortu known better than to ask me to match that puttickler shade of baby ribbon.

"It ain't enough," I told her when I drove home a few evenings ago with the wrong kind. "It ain't enough, Mrs. Colyum, that I should toll six days a week at the Sanctum to earn a livelihood."

Whassat? Mrs. Colyum broke in. "What kind o' a 'hood' did you say?" "Livelihood," I repeated, wondering if I had used the wrong word. But the Little Colyum was sitting in the middle of the floor on the dictionary, eating her supper, we having sent her high chair to be fixed, where Mrs. Colyum had pushed the bottom out of it fixing up her window shades. So I let it go at that.

"How d'ye spell it?" Mrs. Colyum went on, and I could feel myself getting hot under the collar. "It don't make no difference how y' spell it," I replied back. "I earn it, an' that ortu be enough."

"Do you call the $3.85 you bring home last Sattidy a livelihood?" she kept on.

"Well, I'm willin' t' admit," said I, "that I don't get what I'm worth at the Sanctum, but—"

"No, Junius," Mrs. Colyum said, quiet-like, "if you work as hard at the Sanctum as you do around home, you certainly don't get what you're worth. If y' did we'd all three be out t' the pore farm now."

The gas and coal men's laughs this winter are never more than a few hours long.

Our most important New Year's resolution was a resolution not to make any.

Voices From The Past. "Please, Sir, I want a penny's worth of candy."

Where Do They Get It? (From the Lake County Times) FOR SALE OR TRADE, a big paying hotel and boarding house; forty-five roomers always full.

There are one million ways to get into trouble. But the easiest way, according to Harry Ackley is to remind a woman that she's getting wrinkled.

STAR DRUG CO.

"You Save Money" says the Good Judge

And get more genuine chewing satisfaction, when you use this class of tobacco. This is because the full, rich, real tobacco taste lasts so long, you don't need a fresh chew nearly as often. And a small chew gives more real satisfaction than a big chew of the ordinary kind ever did. Any man who uses the Real Tobacco Chew will tell you that.

Put up in two styles

RIGHT CUT is a short-cut tobacco

Poppies

'Twas summer time in France. Near the close of one bright day, O'er the battle fields I'd wandered Where grim death had held full sway.

Have you heard of Flanders poppies— How they bloom in beauty rare— How they sway and nod on every breeze, As tho' beckoning some one there?

As I stood there on the hilltop, Looking o'er a land once fair, I beheld their countless acres— Poppies, poppies every where.

Who would guess this was a shell hole— That a home had once stood there— For the poppie's silken brightness Hid the scars the war left bare.

Oh, what were the many secrets They had covered these few years! And my heart was filled with sadness While the poppies caught my tears.

Had our brave boys fought and fallen Where these flaming poppies stood— Ah, they gave their best in Flanders. As they did in Argonne Wood!

And there on the western hill slope, In the suns last quivering ray, Were the endless rows of markers, Showing where each soldier lay.

Now, the sunlight had all faded. As I watched this touching scene— The gentle twilight touched her palette— Left a trembling, silvery sheen.

And the rows of pure white markers, With rows of flaming poppies too, Softly blended, softly blended, With the stars and vaulted blue.

—OBSERVANT

Per capita consumption of tobacco in the United States has risen from two pounds annually at the time of the civil war to eight pounds at the present time.

CORRECTION

An error was made in the Bargain Day special advertisement of the Palace Fruit company, of 524 Main street, in yesterday's issue of the Herald. The advertisement called for eggs at 50 cents per dozen. This should have read "oranges, 50 cents per dozen, reduced from 75 cents."
