At the Theaters

THE STAR
You remember Thomas Meighan from his sterling performances in such big pictures as "Male and Female," "Why Change Your Wife?" and "The Prince Chap." As you probably predicted, Tom is a star now. His first stellar vehicle is "Civilian Clothes," adapted from the popular stage play of the same name, and I'm sure you'll vote it the best picture in which Mr. Meighan has ever appeared. This theatre will show again tonight.

"Civilian Clothes" is a delightful comedy romance. It's about a petted society girl who marries a captain overseas chiefly because he looks so handsome in his uniform. Later she hears he has been killed in action and has slipped back into her old butterfly life, when he unexpectedly appears, dressed in loud and ill-fitting civilian clothes. Then the fun begins.

Martha Mansfield, the beautiful Follies favorite who was with John Barrymore in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," is the leading woman and Hugh Ford, the veteran director, made the picture. It's a Paramount. You'll like it.

Blackmailers thrive during three reels of Mack Sennett's newest five-part super-comedy, "Love, Honor and Behave," to be seen at the Star theatre. Eddie Gribbon and Kalla Paaba raise rumor and gossip to the dignity of high finance and sell photographs to interested parties for fabulous sums, their wives entangling the virtuous as well as the vicious.

The scene of their operations is the Gargle Inn, whither "Judge" Murray goes in the interest of prohibition, and Phyllis Haver to reclaim an errant husband, Ford Sterling. This part of the picture is one of the fastest moving episodes that Mr. Sennett has yet achieved. As a result of his experiences at the Gargle Inn, "Judge" Murray makes up his mind, and forever sets it there, that faith is not to be reposed in circumstantial evidence, and that incriminating appearances are more likely to be false than true.

MONDALE

Unquestionably one of the most meritorious show engagements in this city for years was the one which closed at the Mondale Thursday night, when McCormack and Sis and Jack Valmore, singers, impersonators, imitators and monologists with a real punch, entertained a crowd that packed the theater to the doors. These entertainers, long on the Pantages and Hippodrome circuits, displayed remarkable versatility and ability, and the audience was in meriment from the first to the last of their acts. There were the more serious moments also, McCormack singing favorite songs in a rich tenor voice that has no superior among the many singers who have visited this city.

These popular entertainers have made arrangements with Manager Ted. White to return to the Mondale within five or six weeks, with a bigger company, and unsurpassed vaudeville is promised. Manager White states that he stepped out of the limits of too much conservatism, and intends to give the public more of this sort of shows, because it has been amply demonstrated that they are appreciated. The public, he says, is entitled to some of the good things in the show line, and he is going to see that they get them.
