Mills Addition
 Folks Want Paving

Paving of East Main street and Wantland avenue, the first with a 25 foot and the second with 18 foot foot pavement, was the wish of the majority of the Mills Addition Improvement club yesterday.

If the $15,000 sewer bond issue is sold at once, so that the sewer work can be done immediately, the improvement club hopes to include the paving in this year's street improvement program. The bitulithic type of paving surface was favored.

Dental Expert to Be Here March 7

The local dental association has received word from the state association that Dr. H. C. Fixott, state lecturer, will be in Klamath Falls March 7. He will deliver a lecture, accompanied by stereopticon slides, on the care of teeth, dealing mostly with the importance of the care of the teeth of children.

The local association has not definitely decided where the evening lecture will be held. During the afternoon of March 7 Dr. Fixott will address the high school students. If there is a demand for his services outside of Klamath Falls he is authorized to stay for two or three days and speak in other parts of the county.

Irrigation Tax Lists in Making

A. L. Wishard, secretary of the water users association, is preparing tax statements which will be mailed to the members of the local irrigation districts in a few days.

There is little change in the district tax, says Mr. Wishard, a slight reduction if anything.

The $2 operation and maintenance charge, fixed last year, is applied for the first time on the coming collections. The former rate was $1.25.

Mrs. Mabel R. Ryan is continuing out a period of 21 years of continuous service as a member of the school board in Portland, Me.

I'm sorry that there are not enough chairs and that so many have to stand. I can sympathize with you for I knew how it is. Last winter I had the flu and Dr. Soule smiled reassuringly at me and said: "Cheer up! I'll have you on your feet in no time!" And he did. I had to sell my flivver.

 A beautiful statuesque blonde arrived from Portland recently to act as stenographer for a dignified business man of Klamath Falls. On the morning of her first appearance, she went straight to the desk of her employer.

"I presume," she remarked, "that you begin the day here the same as they do in Portland."

"Oh, yes, replied the employer, without glancing up from the letter he was reading.

"Well, hurry up and kiss me then," said the girl. "I want to go to work."

HIS OLD BALD HEAD

By J. P. Kelley

Have you heard the story the gossips spread
 Of Garrett Van Riper's old bald head? No?
 Well, Garrett's the fellow of local renown
 Who hadn't a hair on his pretty pink crown—
 But he held his own with the court-house ginks,
 Who likened his dome to skating rinks—
 He called them nuts, and blithering yaps,
 Including his friends, the two De-Laps.

Yes, Garrett was brave and going great,
 Till the ladies noticed his glistening pate,
 And giggling and gurgling in feminine glee
 Even suggested that some time he should get a hoe and cultivate
 A hair or two on his old bald pate,
 Forgetting even as most girls would
 That it's hard to plant where the soil's not good.

Thus time went on; they got his nanny,
 And he spoke his mind to Minnie and Fanny,
 To Meta and Fred, and Frankie, too:
 "You fellows are smart, 'y bet
 But I know, it isn't fair—
 To talk of my lack of hair—
 I know it's scarce and embryonic,
 But I'm going to go and get some tonic,
 An' I'll make it grow, grow like the dickens,
 Just wait and see, you old-time chickens."

So he got some garlic—ground it up;
 Some castor oil, about a cup;
 A piece of cheese, some Rose Queen soap,
 And mixed it up; 'twas awful dope;
 Applied the mess within, without,
 And waited for the hair to sprout.

Full two weeks passed, and still no hair,
 And Garrett's hope turned to despair;
 He wept and cried, and cried and wept,
 And dreamed of it when'er he slept,
 And rubbed his fingers feelingly
 On the slippery spot where the hair should be.

The girls would pass and slap his nut
 And say: "You're there, Oh, yes, all but
 That stuff on top that we call hair—
 If you had that, you'd be all there!
 Such talk as that tried Garrett sorely,
 And, his dander up, he called Fred Morley.
 Said he to Fred: "You're a detective.
 The ladies here say I'm defective;
 And you are now duly commissioned
 To learn if I am so deficient
 That I can't grow a single bristle,
 If you find one, just toot your whistle."

Well, Morley came without much hope
 And brought with him a microscope,
 His tweezers and a worn out prayer,
 And did his best to find a hair.
 He'd squeeze his dome, and then he'd pinch,
 And jab his tweezers in an inch
 And pull it out, an' bless your soul!
 All he could find was just the hole.

Then Minnie'd laugh, and Meta'd grin,
 And Sheriff Low who'd happen in
 Would say: "were I in your position,
 I'd go and get a requisition
 To buy a wig or a boudoir cap;
 So, on your way you poor old sap,
 And ask the county to help you out,
 For, dern your hide, your hair went sprout!"

Thus Garrett tried. You know the rest
 How finally he gamely 'fessed
 That his head was barren without a doubt—
 And how the county helped him out,
 And bought him a second hand toupee,
 Which Garrett is wearing to this day.
 There's truth in every word I've said;
 There's a funny wig on Garrett's head;
 And like the deacon's one hoss shay,
 Will fall to pieces some fine day.
