The Office Cat

BY JUNIUS

According to an exchange a Los Angeles barber has a sign on his window: "Hair cut while you wait." If he can cut it any other way he's a magician.

Edison did not discover the talking machine. A fellow named Adam beat him to it.

Caught, H'Gosh
Thus queried the well-known assessor:
"Of a dog, sir, you are the possessor."
"Not me," answer I.
Then the blame dog came nigh
And I changed my reply to "Oh, yes-sor?"

A man is a queer animal. After his wife has caught him in a dozen lies he still expects her to believe him.

The old-fashioned person who reckoned time by his or her surgical operation must make way now for the one who says "That was before (or after) I had the flu."

Foolishment
There was a young girl from Cohoes,
Who had seven corns on her toes;
When men would ask why
she'd start in to cry,
And paste each one right on the nose.

A Bill For Chicken Feed
"To think they call this chicken feed!" mourned Gus Donovan as he mullied over a handful of nickles and dimes, "I never fed a chicken on less than a $5 bill in my life."

Wonder if movie stars we see scrubbing floors and delving into wash tubs ever do such things outside of photoplays?

Is That So!
Dear Luke—If a woman opened a bar in Havana, would a saloon keeper? S. K., Central Park, Havana, Cuba.—Luke McLuke.

So Goes the World
The dry hole was never drilled sufficiently deep to please the owner of the land. Probably the man paying the expense feels sure that it was drilled entirely too deep.

What Would Happen To Art
If Bill Hart should lose his gun?
If Roscoe Arbuckle should get thin?
If Kitty Gordon should scald her back?
If Eugene O'Brien should grow whiskers?
And Tom Mix run out of "the makings?"

Greasy Enough Now
Prince Axel has been offered the Hungarian throne. Somehow the name suggests lubricating oil—and revolution.

Every horse hates a check rein. That is one check they won't endorse.

Advertising pays. Try it and see.
