Is a Complicated and Interesting Process

Not long ago a lady said to us, "you don't really make windows in your mill do you?" Upon being told that we did, she was much interested and expressed a desire to see just how it was done. A few days later she came to the mill and saw a window made. Saw the large rough boards surfaced to an exact thickness—saw the pieces ripped and cut to the exact length—saw the morticing and the tenoning done—saw them moulded and put together and sanded smooth, all by special machinery and all by Klamath Falls workmen (many to whom spent part of their wages in her husband's store.) She followed the sash downstairs, saw it oiled—saw the glass cut and put in place—saw the little zinc points driven in to hold it solidly—saw the putty run on smoothly and finally saw it put up in the racks ready for the customers who

THE STAR

For its picture attraction tonight the Star Theatre will offer the latest production from the Selznick studios, which is entitled "The Highest Law" and which features Ralph Ince as director and star player.

The opening scenes take place in the present day in New York City during a Memorial Day anniversary. An old G. A. R. is noticed by a couple of "doughboys" to be reverently gazing at a statue of Abraham Lincoln.

After a recital of stirring civil war events by the old Union soldier, the younger men of the present day are also impressed and they register their tribute by a strict military salute to the memory of the great Emancipator.

Mr. Ince will be seen in his remarkably impersonation of Abraham Lincoln and in the supporting cast will be seen Robert Agnew, Margaret Sedden, Alton Burr and Cecil Crawford the talented child actor who enacts the role of "Tad" Lincoln.

THE MONDALE

Lovers of romance and colorful adventure will hail with delight Triangle's thrilling pirate play, "The Sea Panther," featuring William Desmond and Mary Warren. This play will be shown at the Mondale Theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. It is an adaptation of Kenneth B. Clarke's successful story which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

"The Sea Panther" is the tale of a gallant and adventurous pirate who captures a pretty English maid bound for the American colonies, and dices and duels for her life and love.

Every effort has been made by Triangle, handling the pirate scenes, to produce the most vivid effects. Special types were selected for the pirate crew who present a most villainous appearance.

For the pirate was a most unique and interesting cut-throat. With the black flag, decorated with skull and cross-bones at his masthead, he carried death in his terrorized wake. Expecting no quarter he gave none. The fate of his captives was sealed with the capture of their ships.

Submarines are a grave peril on the seas, but a transport can cross the ocean in seven to ten days in these times. The ships in the early days, however, took from four to six months in making the passage from Europe to America. This gave the pirates plenty of opportunity to accomplish their villainy.

Piracy is probably the oldest of trades. Pompey of Rome wiped out a fleet of a thousand pirate ships, and England in the early part of the nineteenth century cleaned out a vast Chinese pirate organization of junks that infested the Pacific. The Malays took heavy toll, and the green waters of the Spanish Main roll over many a scuttled galleon laden with incalculable wealth. With the destruction of Captain Kid, Blackbeard and the Corsairs of Tripoli, however, pirates took to other and safer ventures.

Entertainment of a high order is therefore awaiting lovers of Stevenson, Captain Marryat, Morgan Robertson and other romanticists, in this beautiful masterpiece of Triangle's, "The Sea Panther."

THE LIBERTY

William Christy Cabanne's powerful story, "The Stealers," the Robertson-Cole super-special which plays at the Liberty Theatre today is a noteworthy event in the motion picture world not only because of the driving force of its theme but because it bids fair to revolutionize the artistry of the screen.

The farcical plot of Blanche Sweet's newest Jesse D. Hampton-Pathe feature, "Her Unwilling Husband," coming to the Liberty Theatre tomorrow hinges on a standing invitation. After a prolonged absence, John Jordan, a glad-of-it bachelor, decides to drop in on his old friend, Gilbert Lenox, for a visit.

Instead of his friend, he found in the house only two Chinese servants and a pretty girl. He thought the girl was his friend's wife. When a second man arrived, she introduced the bachelor as her husband. It was a decided shock.
