ALL WRONG
The feller seemed dismayed
As he stood there and surveyed
Some bits of broken bottle on the Walk;
From his eye he brushed a tear,
So we undertook to cheer
His gloomy heart with optimistic talk.

"Friend, there is no use to cry
Over spilt milk—wipe your eye."
We told him, but the poor man only sighed:
What you say is very true,
It's a foolish thing to do—
But is wasn't milk my dear air," he replied.

A feller's position in this world makes a wonderful lot of difference. An ex-bricklayer, whose social standing was all a few years ago, became a chiropractor, and now he's got a place on the top layer of society in his home town.

Who is the guy Herpicide? asks a reader. Gosh, we thought everybody knew that guy. He's the God of Saving.

To Whom It May Concern:
Although we discovered an ad in a Yreka paper today stating that "Women's walsas half off," we have decided to pass it up.

But, if you see an article in the Yreka papers about a crowd of men gathering in front of a certain department store, you'll understand, that's all.

Cheer up! You don't have to worry about your income tax for another year.

When she reaches the point where she begins to hedge about her age, then its serious for any woman.

GET AN EYE FULL
Some of these pious looking fellows don't mean as much as they pretend to mean, in their argument about low necks and short skirts. You will always notice that they are close enough to get an eye full.

Harry M. Lynch, in the Kokomo, Ind., Tribune, exults thus:
Motor cars are coming down.
Coming down, coming down;
Motor cars are coming down,
My fair lady!
Now he's got us down' it;
We'll buy a 4d and keep to the right,
Keep to the right, Keep to the fight;
We'll buy a 4d and keep to the right,
Keep to the right, Keep to the fight;
We'll buy a 4d and keep to the right,
We'll join the flivvering army.

We agree with Tom Watters that the greatest need of the world today is humility. Hence, whenever we feel ourself growing a bit cocky over our eolumistic prowess we shoot one of our germs to a competitor who chucks it into the ash can, thus restoring our equilibrium.

The average man feels if there is any sidestepping done in his family he is the one to do it.

Nowadays when you hear two men conferring in stage whispers, about a case, it's a conservative wager that they don't mean a lawsuit.
