

AMERICAN ARMY OF OCCUPATION HELD AS MODEL

COBLENZ, April 30.—A complete outfit, a miniature army equipped with all necessary services, capable of taking the field at 24 hours' notice without the assistance of any outside elements and one of the best military units ever organized in the world's history of armies—such is the description that military men, allied, neutral and former enemies apply to the American army of occupation as it is constituted today.

That the efficiency of the training system of the American forces in Germany, the excellence of their equipment and their faultless military bearing are generally recognized throughout Europe is shown by the fact that missions from various countries have either visited Coblenz during the past few months or have applied for permission to come to this base and get first hand knowledge of how it is done.

A few weeks ago the chief of the staff of the Swiss army, accompanied by several officers, spent a week in Coblenz as the guest of General Allen, the American commander. Attended inspections, visited the barracks, reviewed the troops and returned to Berne to tell the officers of the Swiss army that the American army on the Rhine was "the most up-to-date, the best equipped and the best looking military outfit of all the armies of the world."

A commission from the Netherlands made a similar visit and was equally favorably impressed and now the Finnish government has asked permission to send a commission to Coblenz.

Should circumstances require the American army on the Rhine to move against an enemy or to occupy further territory, 10,000 infantrymen composed of the first and second brigades would furnish the bulk of the fighting force.

Their advance would be guarded against surprises and ambush by 300 cavalry and 18 airplanes, which would do the scouting before the moving infantry. Three trained pilots are available for each plane in case of airmen meeting with accidents.

One thousand artillery men, serving eight batteries of field guns, would be on hand to supply a barrage, should it become necessary.

Three hundred men of the signal corps battalion would look after telephone and telegraph communications with the base at Coblenz. The railway engineer battalion, which is receiving constant practical training on a little branch line on the right bank of the Rhine which they are operating would, with the assistance of the motor transports corps, attend to the service of supplies of the expeditionary force.

The engineers first battalion would throw pontoon bridges over such streams as were traversed in the advance. Six ambulance companies, assisted by a medical corps of 600, establishing field hospitals, would give first help to the wounded before their evacuation to the base hospital.

Only one arm used in modern warfare is lacking—tanks. As one officer remarked facetiously: "We have no tanks of any sort in this army."

There is a machine-gun section with every company instead of one to every battalion as formerly.

Thus while the army of occupation in Germany numbers just a little more than half the effectiveness of one American division on a war footing, it is, nevertheless, a real army in the fullest sense of the term.
