Efficiency

"Fine looking bevy of stenographers you have here."
"Thanks."
"But why are they all red-headed?"
"Just an idea of our efficiency expert. He says they reduce the light bill fifty per cent."

We read in the paper the other day where some high brow said that a woman is as young as she looks and the man as young as long as he keeps looking.

Star# the word around that you want to buy a new car and when you get home at night you will climb over the literature that the dealers have sent you.

Percy Evans says that life insurance agents seem to have the impression that a man has no use for the money remaining after the grocer and landlady have been paid, but to spend it on premiums.

No He-Peter

Judge—"What is the charge?"
Policeman—"Intoxicated, your honor."
Judge (to prisoner)—"What's your name?"
Prisoner—"Peter Gunn, sir."
Judge—"Well, I'll discharge you this time, but you mustn't get loaded again."

(Dictographed at a local Sunday School).

"What is it?" quizzed the Sunday School teacher, "that binds us together and makes up better than we are by nature?"
"Corsets," peeped Tiny Tot.

One thing about short skirts is that they are so convenient. For instance: "D'you ever notice how helpful they are getting up stairs"?

Papers say that Henry Ford is going to bring out a tin cow. This country doesn't need a tin cow to give milk, it needs one to give gasoline. Henry should get busy again.

You Can Swear Now, Fellows

A Chicago minister says that "hell" and "damn" are permissible words when properly used. And there is more proper use for them in Chicago than elsewhere, one imagines.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Damn if we know the minister's name, nor does the Plain Dealer say who the hell he is.

"ACTUAL COST" HELD TO BE "INVESTED CAPITAL"

On May 16 the supreme court of the United States handed down an important decision in the La Belle Iron Works case. The decision has an important bearing on income tax because it holds that increased value of property or natural resources owned by corporations may be taxed as income, although such value is listed as invested capital.

Lands bought by La Belle Iron Works in 1904 for $190,000 increased in value in eight years to $1,105,400, and the increase was capitalized on the company's books. During 1912 the old stock of the company, with a par value of $9,915,400, was called in and new stock to the amount of $19,870,800 was issued to old stockholders.

The collector regarded this increase as income, and collected $1,081,184.61 tax on it. This was the basis of the suit. The La Belle Iron Works claimed a refund, and on that issue went to the United States Supreme Court in an appeal from the Court of Claims, which had sustained the ruling made by the commissioner who had collected the tax. The Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the lower court. The result is that the La Belle Iron Works paid more than a million dollars income tax on the increase in value of property originally bought for $190,000.

The case has attracted much attention because it establishes a rule governing increases in value of natural resources and the treatment of such increase for income tax purposes. It is of concern to all corporations holding natural resources, such as ores and timber. Tax laws were thoroughly discussed in the arguments made by attorneys in this case, and all sitting judges that heard the argument concurred in the decision.—American Lumberman.

Why We Should Buy Oregon Products

By George L. Baker
Mayor of Portland

THE prosperity of a state is dependent largely upon its industries. If employment is available, the labor problem and many others correlated, solve themselves.

The people of Oregon owe Oregon their loyal and steadfast support. To support Oregon means to support its industries, which in turn is a support of its citizens.

In the interest of prosperity and a greater Oregon, it is the duty of every citizen to give preference to our home factories and products—not on the ground of sentiment, but as a pure business proposition.

The net result of general support in this line will be continued prosperity for Oregon.
