

The Office Cat

BY JUNIUS

Horace vs. Walt Mason
We admit the stuff of Horace
Was a bit too hefty for us.

Marshall Hooper says that independent looking gink you see, washes and irons his own soft collars.

WANTED—Stenographer to work part time. Apply at once, etc.

There are times when even an employer loses patience.

Judge—"Madam, have you anything to say?"
Prisoner's husband—"Now you've done it, my lord."

Holy Smoke
Dear Office Cat: "If God Almighty would give me the power to go to hell and preach one sermon and give the invitation I could depopulate hell in fifteen minutes."

The above statement was uttered by Billy Sunday, the great evangelist, in one of his sermons recently delivered in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he is conducting an eight weeks campaign, now drawing to a close, against the devil and his cohorts.

Unquestionably this is the boldest challenge ever made to put the prince of darkness out of commission within so short a time. It is intimated that negotiations are now pending to put into execution this unique project, which if perfected will be so announced in this column. It may interest Springfieldians to know that Mr. Sunday, Mr. Junior and the party of fifteen or more are stopping at the Staton, Cincinnati's crack hotel. This leads the writer (a preacher) to ask if Christ and his apostles came to Springfield to engage in religious work would they stop at the Leland?

Amos Teah
An unfortunate motorist smashed into one of those concrete traffic signs with his car the other day and was removed to the jail. His car, we presume, was removed to the junk heap.

Antagonistic Aantehom
Oh, how I'd love to throttle that guy
And wind up his incoherent chattering;
The reason is this. If you care to know why—
Because he says "ending" for "inning."

Why Not Try the American Ming
Sir: After years of observation we conclude that there is only one thing worse than the man who won't admit defeat—that is the man who will.

Free Advice to Young Men
Don't kiss a girl on the hand unless she has been eatin' garlic.

Onwald Hector says never yell "What Hoe?" to a man working in the garden.
