

WOOL MARKET IRREGULAR, FINE GRADES DROP

Some Trade in Oregon
Fine and Mediums in Original Bags Is Reported—Condon Sale
Prices Fair

Herald Washington Bureau
BOSTON, Mass., June 30.—The past week has not differed greatly in the eastern markets from the preceding week in the wool trade. Some houses which reported a fair business previously have had a very indifferent request for wool last week, while, on the other hand, merchants who reported business very dull last week have had a fair call from the manufacturers during the present week. On the whole, the market continues irregular with prices holding about steady, although it must be said that fine staple bright wools have shown a downward tendency. These wools have been held relatively high, however. While the demand continues of a general nature, the call comes chiefly for wools of high quarter-blood and finer.

During the week just closed there appears to have been more call for the territory wools of the fine and fine medium order and fair sales of these wools are reported by certain houses at prices which are firm. The wools sold have been chiefly of the Utah, Nevada and Arizona type clothing wools, i. e., short wools costing the manufacturer about 60 to 63 cents, depending upon the quality and character of the wool, while the longer wools of the French or medium combing description have cost the mills from 65 to 70 cents, clean basis, depending upon how good they were.

Some Trade in Oregon Wools
There has been some little trade in Oregon fine and fine medium wools in the original bags at prices which indicate a clean cost of about 73 to 74 cents, while graded half-blood combing wools have been sold at about 68 to 70 cents, clean basis, the higher price being for every choice wool. This means about 24 cents for the half-bloods, possibly a little more for a very choice wool.

Thus, it will appear that the prices paid in the west are all that the market will allow at the present time and it is a question whether the level of values in the west is not even a little higher relatively than the prices now prevailing in the seaboard markets, when the freight and other landing and carrying are figured.

Condon Prices Good
This is shown more or less conclusively as regards the wools sold at the sale on Condon, when a prominent eastern buyer paid anywhere from 17 3/4 to 20 1/4 cents for fine and fine medium wools shrinking somewhere from 67 to 70 per cent. This is estimated to mean a clean landed cost of 65 to 71 cents in Boston, which is fully the level of the market here for such wools and it is a question whether wools of similar description have not even been sold here for a little less money. Buying has proceeded with moderation generally through the west, a considerable business having been done also in the way of consignments, against cash advances. About a million pounds each of eight and twelve months wools were sold in Kerrville, Tex., this week at 20 to 24 cents, the higher price for the twelve months wool meaning a clean landed cost in Boston of about 70 cents. Thus, these wools are bringing full market value also.

Buying Is Slow
In the bright wool sections of the country buying is proceeding slowly still. The farmers are reluctant to accept the prices which the dealers can afford to pay today and while they are less eager to pool their wools after the adverse experiences of a year ago, they are inclined to hold for what they believe may be better prices later on.

Among the mills there is little new reported this week. Business on new account is rather slow but there is still sufficient business on the books to keep the manufacturers well occupied for some weeks to come. Spinners and combers report business rather slow but prices steady as reported during the past three or four weeks.

Local Collector Gets Fine Lot of Curios In Trip to Lava Beds

A. C. Yaden returned home from a three day trip to the lava beds Monday evening and brought with him a large number of archeological specimens and articles thought to have been made in prehistoric times by a race of humans who inhabited this section but whose possible identity is lost, no burial places or traces other than relics remaining.

The curios are distinctly Indian but the tribal identity is foreign to the well-known Indian races which inhabited this section previous to the advent of the whites and the tribes which have been residents since the coming of the Spanish to this coast in the 1500 A. D. period.

Mr. Yaden collected many of his relics between the stronghold of Captain Jack and the lake shore and the list includes some very peculiar fire sticks, arrow heads, cutting knives, sewing awls and other like equipment common in the daily existence of the prehistoric race to which these instruments belonged.

Oregon Wood Used in Congressional Gavel; Stands Test

Herald Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON, June 30.—Speaker Gillett and house members who preside over the committee of the whole have at last found something which will not crumble into fragments under the powerful blows of the house gavel.

The newly discovered treasure is nothing less than a disc of hard wood from an Oregon forest—the heart of a Coos Bay myrtle tree.

It was presented to Representative McArthur when he was speaker of the Oregon legislature in 1909 after he had smashed a score of marble slabs and oak blocks and was used during the latter part of that session and also during Mr. McArthur's second term as speaker in 1913. It was presented by a Coos county friend who also gave Mr. McArthur a beautiful gavel of the same material.

McArthur Wields Gavel
A few days ago when Mr. McArthur was presiding over the house he wielded the gavel with such force as to split the walnut pounding block into a dozen pieces. He immediately thought of the Oregon myrtle disc which was reposing in a bookcase at his Washington residence and on the following day presented it to Speaker Gillett. The speaker and several temporary presiding officers have delivered countless sledge hammer blows upon the face of the disc without making a dent and its resonant qualities are superior to ordinary wood or marble.

Myrtle Stands the Gaff
Breaking and splintering the pounding boards and blocks on the speaker's desk has become a habit with the presiding officers of the house, but it looks as though the Coos Bay myrtle product has them guessing. Mr. McArthur says he hates to part with the disc, but feels that it was serving no useful purpose until recently pressed into service. His gavel, affectionately known as "Lizzie," is dearer to his heart than the disc and he wouldn't part with it for love or money.

San Francisco Men Buy the Clark Mill

DORRIS, Cal., June 30.—A deal has just been consummated by which the old Clark mill a few miles northeast of Dorris has been taken over by W. E. Samuels and W. C. Mahoney of San Francisco. These two gentlemen, until recently, had charge of the operation of the Graham mill west of Dorris, which was destroyed by fire Monday.

The mill taken over by Messrs. Samuels and Mahoney was owned by Golden and Tallow of Portland. It is a small concern of 20,000 daily capacity. Arrangement has been made for the delivery of lumber to the Associated Lumber & Box company yards here.
