

CLIFF TRIBES ONCE NOMADS SAYS SAVANT

CANYON, Texas, July 27.—That the Pueblo Cliff Dwellers of New Mexico were originally buffalo hunting and nomadic Indians of Western Oklahoma and northwestern Texas and that they gradually developed their architecture and their arts as they moved westward, finally settling down to permanent habitations in New Mexico, has been definitely established by archaeological investigations made in Texas Panhandle and Eastern New Mexico by Warren K. Moorehead, geologist of Andover, Massachusetts, and J. B. Thorburn, representing the Oklahoma Historical Society.

This is an announcement important to science, as formerly it was generally supposed that the Cliff Dwellers came northward from Mexico.

The explorations of Mr. Moorehead and Mr. Thorburn carried them along the courses of the Canadian and Cimarron Rivers in the Panhandle of Texas and thence eastward into New Mexico as far as the Mora Valley. In Mora Valley eight or ten typical Pueblo ruins were found in a fairly good state of preservation. From the Mora Valley eastward to the Oklahoma line the stone buildings of the Indians become smaller, more primitive and less important until they finally disappear.

Upon completion of the work done preparatory to this announcement, Messrs. Moorehead and Thorburn delivered addresses on the subject before the West Texas Normal school at Canyon. It was here that the first definite announcement of this important discovery was made.

This was the second archaeological exploration trip Mr. Moorehead has made to this part of the country in connection with the tracing of the origin of the Cliff Dweller culture.

ASTORIA—When the annual convention of the Oregon chapter of the American Association of Engineers opened here every mode of conveyance was used in bringing delegates to the convention—airplane, canoe, train, motor car, steamer.

LA GRANDE—For the first time in several years it is reported that cattle again are being poisoned by larkspur. Several members of the Summerville Livestock association have suffered the loss of several cattle on the reserve, most of the dead cattle being found near Five Point creek.

Red Cross Reports Little Diseases In Wake of Flood

PUEBLO, Colo., July 27.—One of the features of the relief work in connection with the Pueblo disaster was the almost complete absence of disease that is popularly supposed to follow in the wake of disaster, according to American Red Cross workers engaged in aiding the rehabilitation of citizens of the inundated city. The Red Cross nurses and relief workers, in conjunction with the state and city health authorities, as one of the first steps in the prevention of disease distributed information among the citizens as to the precautions to be used in selection of foods and drinking water. Realizing the Red Cross forces offered an excellent channel for the dissemination of such information, the city health authorities intrusted a large part of this work to the relief workers who made daily visits to the homes of hundreds of Pueblo citizens.

S. P.'s June Business Shows Improvement

The Southern Pacific Company's monthly statement of earnings and expenses, issued yesterday for the month of June, shows a slight increase in net railway operating income over that of June, 1920, although the net revenue from railways operation shows a decrease of $577,638.03.

The total net railway operating income for the six months ended June, 1921, shows an increase over the first six months in 1920 of $4,562,561.20.

The June statement shows a better condition than the May report, when there was a decrease in the net railway operating income from that of May 1920. The May net rail-227.14 and that of June was $3,180,714.53.
