Letters From The People

THE FREE MARKET.

Mr. Editor: The main purpose of this letter is to urge the farmers to come forward without delay and take part in the free market. If they cannot come forward by next Saturday so that the public can be supplied with produce the market will be closed and the experiment will be declared a failure.

I am also making a last appeal to the public spirited townspeople to help interest, the farmers, many of the producers do not know yet about the wonderful opportunity that is open to them. They do not know that a splendid sale has been created for their produce and that people came to the big market place in the Central Hotel building last Saturday by the hundreds, clamoring for chickens, eggs, butter, potatoes, fruit, various vegetables, etc., and went away disappointed. Ten times as much stuff could have been sold had the farmers brought it.

It seems a great pity that since the demand is there and there are large quantities of stuff in the country actually going to waste, that no one is willing to assist me to spread the information among the farmers. Of course, many of them know that a free market is being started here in town but they are rushed to death with their harvests and are hoping and expecting it will get into running shape without their aid, intending to join later after the rush. These farmers should be visited and urged to strike now while the iron is hot. Each farmer should make it his personal duty to help the market now even if he must sacrifice to do so, for though he may not need the market now, it may mean everything to him later.

All loyal Klamath people should grasp this great opportunity for developing home industry. The possibilities of a free market are beyond computation. The people must be asleep that they do not eagerly grasp the chance to encourage the growth of vegetables in this county. We could acquire a national reputation for our cabbage, lettuce, celery, etc., if we had any incentive to raise them.

All the farmers I have talked to have told me that the present way of trying to dispose of their produce is absolutely unsatisfactory. Many, who used to raise surplus produce for selling have ceased to raise more than their families could use and have devoted their attention to the larger crops, such as hay. All expressed themselves very much in favor of a free market.

A free market means independence for the producer and the elimination of the present bitterness between the farmers and the merchant, for the farmer will have more money to buy from the merchant, the things he needs. It will all work out for the best for everyone, the merchants as well as the consumers.

Discontent and bitterness is seething among the consumers and if the high cost of living can be reduced, people will stay here instead of leaving town by the scores as they are now doing. Many are planning to leave before the snow flies. Our reputation has been anything but favorable on the outside as far as the cost of living is concerned.

Once more, I say; let us get together right away and get the farmer to come to the market next Saturday.

Mr. Blanas, who started this movement, and myself have come to the end of our ropes. We have both worked very hard. The owners of the Central Hotel have contributed a magnificent market place for the experiment, and the battle is nearly won, but if others will not now take hold there is no use going any farther.

Now, farmers, come. Come early as possible as the biggest buying is between 8 o'clock and 10 o'clock A. M.

WILL DEDICATE HIGHWAY SEPT. 6TH AT BORDER

BLAINE, Wash., Aug. 24.—Western America's great coast road, the Pacific highway, which runs from Vancouver, B. C., across Washington, Oregon and California to Tia Juana, Lower California, will be dedicated formally here on the border line between Canada and the United States, September 6th.

Dedication of the road will be part of the ceremonies marking completion of the Peace Portal, a huge arch built across the highway here to mark the passing of more than 100 years of peace between Canada and the United States. Representatives of the governments of Canada, France and the United States and state and highway officials are expected to attend.

While work is not completed on the Pacific highway, it is believed that by 1925 every foot of the road will be covered by paving. If the work is completed at that time, the highway will be the first transcontinental highway to be paved its entire length.

Work on the road has been underway since 1910, when an improvement road the length of the coast was advocated and good roads workers induced the legislatures of the three seaboard states to unite on a program. The highway route was marked and it was agreed that each state should improve the part within its boundaries as rapidly as possible.

A course 1767 miles in length was outlined for the main road and when this summer's paving is completed, about 1,412 miles of the road will be hard-surfaced. In California 883 miles of the highway have been paved, in Oregon the total is 218.8, Washington 287.5 and in British Columbia 22.7.

With completion of paving now underway, the highway will be paved from Blaine to Bellingham in Washington state. Just south of Bellingham there is an unpaved section, and then paving is again found. It continues through Seattle, Tacoma, Olympia, Centralia and Chehalis, and ends south of that town. It begins again north of Vancouver, Washington and continues to the Columbia river. In Oregon paving begins at the interstate bridge at Vancouver, Wash., and extends south through Portland, Salem and Albany. Between Albany and Eugene there will remain an unpaved section after this year's improvement is completed. Between Eugene and Roseburg another section remains without permanent hard surface. These two gaps are all that Oregon must close up in 1922 and 1923.

In California from the state line south to Redding the pavement will remain to be placed after this year. It is now being paved from Redding to Red Bluff. From Red Bluff south through Oroville, Sacramento, Stockton, Merced, Madera, Fresno, Bakersfield, Los Angeles and San Diego to Tia Juana, paving, with exceptions not worth mentioning, has already been laid.

The main Pacific highway passes through the capitals of all three of the coast states and through the leading cities with the exception of San Francisco in California and Spokane in Washington. Typical scenery of the coast lays on each side of the highway in a changing panorama. In its course the road passes from sea level to an altitude of 4,522 feet in its pass over the Siakiyous, and then winds its way back to sea level at San Diego. It is seldom out of sight of rugged mountains and goes within shadows of some of the largest peaks in the nation. From it roads lead to Rainier national park in Washington, Crater Lake national park in Oregon and Yosemite and Sequoia national parks in California.

Although ducks, of which there are nearly 200 species, are the most numerous in northern regions, they are found all over the world.
