Visits His Own Grave!

Here you see J. F. Hurley at his own grave in Salem, Mass. Hurley, Civil War veteran and former mayor of Salem, is home on furlough from the soldiers' home in Virginia. While home, he went to see the tombstone he has prepared for his last resting place. Many other sight-seers go to see it.

EWAUNAS HOLD STRONG PLACE

The Ewaunas are elated over Sunday's victory for as the standing goes now, there is no way to prevent the mill team from being tied in second place with either the Jewel or Copco teams after next Sunday. Perhaps it was this fact which caused Manager Daggott Sunday to nervously pace the sidelines when his team was in action against the Plumbobs and when the game was over, there was a cherubic smile on his face that, it is said, means the downfall of both the Jewel and Copco teams when the Ewaunas cross bats with them.

The league standing shows the Jewels and Copcos, both with 5 wins and 4 losses, and the Ewaunas with 5 wins and 5 losses. No matter which team in the first rank loses Sunday coming, the Ewaunas are tied with the loser. That is where the elation comes in.

The question asked now—with the Ewauna team rejuvenated and spirit of fight and ginger injected into them, can they make a sweep of their next games with the league leaders? Should they do it, that silver loving cup will adorn a hand carved pedestal in the mill boys' headquarters the balance of this year. The sports are wondering how far this dope will figure out.

One sport remarked that if the Ewauna team made it a point to practice every night for an hour or so, it might be done easily. They also say that O'Neill must keep his throwing arm in condition now to do the mound work in the hardest played games of the season, at least every fan says that within the next
