

Personal Mention

Mr. and Mrs. George Stephenson and small son are spending a couple of days in town from Dorris. D. O. (Buck) Williams, Herbert Barry, and Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Paddock returned last night from the Williams ranch on the Sycan marsh. "Herb," who spent a great part of his two weeks' visit at the ranch fishing, is reported to have brought a fine catch of fish home with him. C. C. Low and C. R. DeLap left today about noon for a camping trip to Huckleberry mountain. Besides getting a supply of berries for canning they will hunt for deer and bear. Captain and Mrs. A. L. Davis are tourist visitors here from Camp Lewis. They were guests at the White Pelican hotel last night. Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Eaton, and M. D. Eaton, Jr., arrived yesterday from Stockton and spent the night at the White Pelican hotel before going on to Crater Lake. Mrs. H. J. Turner of Portland is a guest at the White Pelican hotel for a few days. Chester DeLap is in town today from his ranch at Round lake purchasing supplies and visiting with his parents. P. C. Carlson who operates a ranch south of town was in the county seat yesterday after supplies. O. M. Hector, local merchant returned last night from a ten days' visit in San Francisco. Most of the time was spent in buying stock for the store. Miss Lucile Harlan left this morning for Berkeley where she will enter Miss Head's school for girls. W. D. Harlan accompanied his daughter and will remain with her until she gets settled at the school. F. R. Yancey was in town this morning getting supplies for his logging camp. John Van Meter, a Poe valley farmer, was a county seat visitor yesterday for the purpose of attending to business matters and purchasing supplies. D. H. Minnis and wife were in town this morning attending to the final papers connected with their purchase of the Josiah Sparks ranch near Bonanza. Mr. Sparks was in from there also. Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Holmes made a trip to Malin last night to look after the store there. F. C. Coleman made a trip in from his ranch in Swan lake valley yesterday to purchase supplies. Mr. Coleman also brought produce into town for his customers. Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Immel and Miss Lyle Bryson all of Eugene are vacation visitors here today. Miss Bryson graduated last year from the University of Oregon as a major in Journalism. George Stevenson, Edward Geary, and A. M. Collier, journeyed out early this morning before daylight with plans to catch a buck quietly grazing on the mountain ridge south of town. By 10 o'clock Mr. Collier was back at his desk in the First National bank and when questioned about his buck hinted that the least said about the adventure the better. But he did say they saw several does and heard others in the brush, which helps a lot. John Boyle, chief engineer for the California-Oregon Power company, Arthur Leavitt and A. J. McBride, both employees of the company, left last night for a hunting ground known only to themselves, where they insinuated they had a deer apiece staked out. The extent of their luck is still unknown as they expect to be gone most of today. The opening of the season for deer has brought D. B. Campbell down from his retreat at Spring creek. Mr. Campbell came in last night and will get his hunting outfit together today in preparation for an early start tomorrow. Dan Ryan, Fort Klamath stockman, is in town today attending to business affairs. Mrs. R. H. Cook and small son, Craige, left this morning for Marshaltown, Iowa, to visit with Mrs. Cook's mother. FIND COMBINED HARVESTER IS SUCCESS HERE

"Votchatzer Brothers, with one of our machines, are cutting a full swath and threshing 60 bushels of rye an acre on the Hagelestein tract on the Upper lake," said E. W. Fowler, salesman for the Harris Manufacturing company of Stockton, makers of combined harvesters today. "and in a few days another big machine will arrive for George Watt, manager of the Klamath Livestock company's ranch near Keno, who has a thousand acres of wheat and barley to harvest." The Votchatzer Brothers harvester has a 35 foot cut and will thrash 60 acres a day, said Mr. Fowler. Its capacity is 2000 sacks a day. While the rye on the Hagelestein tract is extraordinarily heavy, making it necessary to work slowly. In the thick grain it is not possible to get quite the full 60 acre daily, said Mr. Harris, but a full swath is cut and the separator saves all of the grain. Mr. Hagelestein watched the machine work Tuesday, said Mr. Harris, and said that he was entirely satisfied with the way in which the machine was handling the grain.

Great improvement has been made in the combined harvester in the last few years, said Mr. Fowler. Guy Merrill has a machine now operating in the Tule Lake country, where the heads of the rye are ripe but the straw is still green. By making some adjustments Mr. Harris said that the machine is doing an absolutely clean job, the green straw going through without clogging sieves or vibrators.

"This is a feat that only the thrasher can appreciate," he said. "I'll wager that Mr. Harris will hesitate to believe me when I get back to Stockton and tell him how that machine is working."

When the Watt machine arrives the Harris company will have three harvesters working in Klamath county. Up to last year there had never been a combined harvester used in the county. They have proved so successful, says Mr. Harris, that he expects to place a number next year.

The harvesters are pulled by a traction engine, while an auxiliary engine furnishes power to operate the thrasher. They can be used as a stationary thrasher if desired, to thresh bundles or headed grain.
