Knights Templar to Entertain Grand Officers Wednesday

Calvary Commandery, No. 16., will hold a special session this evening, the first since vacation for the summer was declared. The Order of the Red Cross will be conferred upon a Companion of the Royal Arch and this will be followed by work in the Order of the Knights of Malta.

Commander Frank Ward requests that every Knight Templar in Klamath Falls be present.

At the session tonight arrangements will be completed for the reception and entertainment of the grand commander of Oregon, W. G. Shellenbarger, of Portland, who will make his official visit to Calvary Commandery next Wednesday evening, October 5.
He will be accompanied by the grand generalissimo, Milton L. Myers, who is also the inspector. C. W. Nims, of Ashland, deputy grand commander, has also expressed an intention of being present. These officers together with E. E. Magee, who is junior grand warden, will give the local commandery four of the highest officials in the state, as visitors that evening, and it is planned to make the unusual occasion an event to be long remembered in local Knight Templar circles.

Anatole France is credited with saying that two things are necessary to render women the terrible force they are today: civilization, which gave them draperies; and religion, which gave men scruples.

THE STRAND

A big double feature bill will be given for the benefit of Strand patrons tonight, consisting of "Back of the Man," the Dorothy Dalton and Charles Ray picture which pleased last night's large audience, and "The Learnin' of Jim Benton," a western film that gives Roy Stewart opportunity for display of lots of thrilling action.

Stewart, as Jim Benton, has promised the little school teacher he would not fire unless in self defense, and new to the West she did not know what giving the first shot meant in this country where dead shots were a common thing.

So Jim Benton at the head of his cow punchers, was riding to open the dam which had been closed by the sheepmen and had cut the water supply which meant life to his countless herds of long horns. Jim Benton knew the dam would be guarded by desperate men with orders to shoot to kill. They expected him for he had said he would open the dam at 3 o'clock that afternoon and there was no chance for a surprise.

There was the ping of a "30-30" and Jim Benton's big sombrero lay in the dust, a neat little hole through the crown. It had been a close call for the young cattle baron but the whiz of the bullet had been sweet music to his ears. Now he was released from his promise for it was a case of kill or be killed.

Then occurred a running fight between the punchers from the Flying B, and the hirelings of the sheep interests, which is one of the most thrilling features ever thrown on the screen.
