UN-AMERICAN METHODS

Two thousand years ago because a man refused to condone entrenched greed, hypocrisy and graft, the rabble yelled "crucify him."

But the old order changeth. Yesterday at the county fair grounds Guy G. Emery of Portland, who is accepted by society as a disciple of the Man of Galilee because he has been ordained a minister of the Christian faith, took emphatic issue with his professed master.

The knocker, said the preacher-organizer-orator, in effect, is a pest who must be gotten rid of. If he becomes too pestiferous take him to the railroad station and float him out of town. Telegraph his record ahead and have a citizen's committee await him at the next stop and give him firmly to understand that their community has no place for one of his knocking proclivities.

Whatever may be argued for its effectiveness, this seems truly an unorthodox method of establishing the knocker's worthiness to have it said of him as it was said of the one of old: The beasts of the fields have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man had no place in which to lay his head.

At the risk of being classed with the eligibles for a rail trip—steam or fence—the Herald records its emphatic disagreement with the doctrine enunciated by the reverend doctor.

And the Herald condemns the man, be he priest or layman, international financier or I. W. W., who shows such a brazen disregard for the principles of the constitution and the established processes of the law—not to mention the teachings of the Christianity he professes by his title to defend.

If your neighbor disagrees with you, run him out of town. That is the principle on which the Ku-Klux Klan is founded.

Carry it to its logical conclusion and you get the Ku Klux result—whippings, tarrings, burnings, slayings, an orgy of violence, flouting the freedom that thousands have died for since Runnymede.

Be a booster, advises Dr. Emery. Los Angeles has a 100 per cent boosting population. Look at Los Angeles grow. Go, every other community, exile your knockers, and become even as Los Angeles.

Most reverend sir, you see but the outside of the platter. Peer into the inside of the cup and you find it produces the ilk of Arbuckle, unless the newspapers lie when they tell us that several unmentionable orgies in Los Angeles preceded the tragedy in San Francisco.

A few good knockers on that particular job might have prevented a blot that all the wealth of a community, by which we assume the reverend gentleman measures the difference between Los Angeles and less favored places, can never wipe out. The gentleman may say, for he seems gifted in plausibly setting at naught the code of the centuries, that the crime of an individual cannot be charged against a community.

We answer that still the old law stands and we are each our brother's keeper.

Boosting is all right within its limits. Every good citizen will support those things that are right and work for progress.

But when boosting is defined as being opposed to any criticism of the community or commonwealth, providing the criticism violates neither law or ethics, it becomes opposed to the established machinery and processes of the law and is a menace to the American idea of government.

Railroading a man out of town because he does not agree with any element, whether minority or majority, is tantamount to advocating anarchy and the abolition of trial by jury.

No matter how rounded the periods, how perfect the oratorical poise, with which the sentiment is delivered, it is dangerous, undemocratic and un-American doctrine and the man who utters it needs reasoning with, not by the direct methods that he espouses but by means that will not be in direct contradiction to the principles that he must have pledged himself to when he was ordained.

Will Make Survey of Wild Country in North Montana

HELENA, Mont., Oct. 6.—What is said to be some of the most sparsely settled country in the entire United States is being traversed in Montana this month by a party of surveyors in the employ of the United States land office.

During the summer months a party of 56 men, said to be the largest force of surveyors ever assembled in the state, completed the survey of the Crow Indian reservation. The job is also said to be the largest of its kind ever completed in one season in the state.

After the completion of the Crow survey the party split in two; one section going to the Powder River country, and the other setting out on a long overland trip to the Black foot Indian reservation, at the opposite corner of the state.

For many days at a time, the party will be entirely cut off from the outside world. They will travel with wagons, carrying all of their equipment with them. The journey is expected to require the greater part of a month. While en route, the surveyors will do a number of small pieces of work. It is said that little time would have been saved had the trip been made by rail.

Over several stretches of the route it will be necessary for the party to carry water for the men as well as for their animals. The transients of the party are veterans, but the greater part of the crew is made up of college boys.

They separated in San Francisco in 1874. Louis went to Nevada and then drifted north, while Charles went to Mexico and then to Chicago. The latter plans to go to San Francisco to visit a sister whom he has not seen since the early 70's.

CHURCH QUILTING BEE FINDS HIDDEN BOOZES; OWNER LAMENTS LOSS

WALLA WALLA, Wash., Oct. 6.—A bottle of real bonded whiskey dropped from a cotton batting at a church sewing circle Saturday. The donor of the batting hasn't completely explained the unheralded appearance of the liquor, but her husband has admitted that "there ain't no safe place under the sun no more." He said he fell heir to the contraband and for safe keeping put it in the center of the roll. Then came the call for donations for a quilting bee, and his wife carried the roll to church.

Now comes the sad part. The cork was pulled, the bottle tipped and the contents entered the all absorbing earth.

Souls were relieved and sewing and gossiping were resumed.

ALLOTMENT IS SATISFACTORY TO SHEEP MEN

The Klamath Wool Growers' Association meeting last night at the city hall was attended by about 60 members who met with J. W. Nelson, national chief of grazing, and W. G. Durbin, superintendent of the Modoc National Forest, to discuss questions relative to the increased range allotment in that place for sheep bands.

The allotment made was satisfactory to the majority of the members present. Under the new management, 31,000 head of sheep can be run under the extension plan, a limit of 1500 head to each sheepman. Instructions were given by Superintendent Durbin that a clean bill of health would have to be secured by the rangers before the bands would be admitted to the forest, same to be had from the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture.

Starting November 15, the bands can be ranged until January 15, when they are to be removed. Open range begins again March 15 and continues until the finish of the shearing and lambing season, about June 15, when the forests are to be cleared again. Three cents per head will be the fee charged with a nominal charge of two cents per head a month during the lambing season, Superintendent Durbin stated.

A spirit of optimism prevailed among the members last night over the sheep situation as the lamb market, they said "was looking up" and bids before long to become better. Lambs are bringing better prices on the market than predicted three months ago and this fact offers much encouragement to the growers. The wool market, while far from top prices, seems to be steady with an opportunity to get better as soon as woolen materials demand comes. Prominent growers noticed in the meeting were Charles Sherlock of Lakeview, Dennis O'Connor, G. L. Holbrook and Mike Barry of this district.

Superintendent Durbin left this morning for the Modoc range to provide for the many bands of sheep which soon will be sent there for grazing.
