WILL HONOR MAN WHO EXPLORED THE NORTHWEST

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Oct. 8.—George Rogers Clark, conquerer of the northwest of Revolutionary days and brother of William Clark, the colleague of Meriwether Lewis in the Lewis and Clark expedition in exploring the far northwest, is to be honored, in his native county of Albemarle by a memorial in bronze presenting him on horseback as the central figure of a group which soon will be placed in a park here near the entrance to the campus of the University of Virginia.

The group, the work of Robert Ingersoll Atken, a New York sculptor whose previous masterpiece is the McKinley Monument in Golden Gate Park, San Francisco was a gift to the University of Virginia by Paul Goodloe McIntire, a native of this city and an alumnus of the University. It epitomizes the adventure and achievement of the noted Virginian in exploring and acquiring the territory between the Mississippi and the Alleghenies known as the Northwest.

There are seven figures in the group. Clark, on horseback, is in the center and dominates the group. He is parleying with two Indian chiefs whose distrust or enmity is known in every feature, and especially in their pose, in which their backs are partly turned on the explorer and his Virginians. Clark's party is represented by three figures in typical hunter garb. Two of them held their flintlocks in readiness for defense, or in threat. The third figure is posed over a barrel of powder. A young squaw, the third Indian figure holds a baby.

George Rogers Clark was a native of Albemarle County. The site of the house in which he was born is still shown about three miles northeast of Charlottesville. It is in full view of Monticello and there are evidences in Jefferson's letters that he was acquainted with the Clark family.

Virginia, whom he so signally honored, was slow to acclaim George Rogers Clark. In his last years the legislature of his native state tendered him a sword. He was then living in Louisville, Ky., where his grave is now marked by a monument which is an impressive and dignified tribute to his worth and recognition of his services.

Clark received for his service during the Revolution a grant of land art of which, near Louisville, he spent his last years.

Idaho Completes 1,421 Miles of Road

SPOKANE, Wash., Oct. 7.—"Of the 1847 miles of road work undertaken by the state of Idaho in 1920, approximately 1,421 miles will be completed by November, and the remaining 66 miles will be completed the first of the year," said William Hall, Idaho commissioner of public works, who was in Spokane recently.

Fifty two miles of road have been paved with either cement brick, and the balance with gravel or crushed rock macadam. The roads vary in width from 10 to 24 feet. Uniformity in the construction of county roads is being secured, Mr. Hall said thru the adoption of state standards by the counties. This system has raised the general standard, he said.

9,500 Confederate Survivors Draw Pensions From Va.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 8.—Virginia's confederate pensioners now number 9,575 about one-half of whom are women. The state auditor declares it is becoming increasingly apparent that the veterans are passing away far more rapidly than their wives, due to the fact that in nearly all instances on record the wives are considerably younger than their husbands. Many of the veterans were married twice.

Virginia pays its Confederate veterans $200 a year in case of total blindness, $100 a year in case of total disability, and pays $60 a year to widows of veterans who were married before May 1, 1880.

DECIDE UPON CITY FOUNDER

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8.—A dispute as to who founded St. Louis has been settled in the opinion of the Missouri Historical Society. The society asserts Pierre Laclède, French fur trader, was the founder.

Records of the Society show that Laclède directed August Chouteau, 24 years old, to land on the site of the city. Chouteau with a party set foot here Feb. 14, 1764, according to the records and Laclède arrived later but was recognized as the founder.

Recently a proposition to erect a memorial for Chouteau was discussed. The historical society announced that Henri Chouteau, a direct descendant of Chouteau and a member of the society, offered to pay the cost of the memorial provided the monument would name Chouteau as the founder of the city. The offer was declined.

Then the descendant had an inscription on the tombstone of Chouteau recut. The society declared the original inscription gave the birth of Chouteau as 1750 and said he was sent by Laclède, but in the recutting claimed that the date of birth was changed to 1740, making Chouteau's age when he arrived here 24 and making it appear Chouteau was the founder.

Both sides in the controversy finally agreed upon Father Lawrence J. Kenny, professor of history at St. Louis University, as arbiter in the matter.

Father Kenny, in his findings, verified the position of the society and said authentic records show that Chouteau's mother was born in 1733 and that if Chouteau was born in 1740 as maintained by his descendants, his mother would have been only seven years old when he was born. The arbiter suggested that Chouteau be credited as a coworker of Laclède.

In England more than 15,000 women registered as domestic servants are drawing unemployment benefits, notwithstanding the fact that housewives still complain of their inability to obtain help.

One on the big English railways has a curious regulation forbidding women to occupy seats in the smoking compartments, unless they are willing to pay an extra six cents on demand.
