"If it were not for the child—!" But the child did exist,—a lovely, gold-curved cherub,—and so, for her sake, Ruth Janeway endured much. The cad to whom he was married flaunted his old flames before her; he made their home the scene of many mad revels wherein his worthless friends disported themselves and his own child was made to play a part. And then one night— But you must see it for yourself to learn the message that a silken tassel told,—and what a hushed voice whispered over the telephone in the dead of the night.—W. W. FAMOUS DOORS OF HISTORY

Marvel of Workmanship Seen on Many of Those of Churches of the Old World.

Among the famous doors of history are the carved wooden doors of the church of Santa Sabina, Rome, depicting in relief, scenes from the Old and New Testaments. These are one of the most remarkable examples of early Christian sculpture extant.

In the earliest times, as in Babylon, doors swung on sockets instead of hinges.

In Roman days wooden doors were decorated with bronze and inlaid, and throughout the Middle Ages richly carved doors of wood adorned the churches.

In the Gothic period, wooden doors were decorated with wrought-iron hinges which were often elaborated into intricate ornamentation covering a large part of the door.

The doors of the cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris of the Thirteenth century are the finest examples of this class.

During the Renaissance in Germany and France, elaborately carved doors were among the most beautiful products of wood sculpture.

Some of the old English doors were formed of narrow planks placed side by side and in dwelling houses generally, in the Middle Ages the doors were small and fairly simple, meant for strictly practicable purposes and often provided with some means of defense.

The doors of the Norman period were round headed, while with the Thirteenth century, came the doorway with the pointed arch and later the flattened arch. In the case of interior doors, splendid old polished mahogany doors were important features in some old English homes and there were old oak doors of wonderful beauty, especially when found in oak-paneled rooms.—From the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association.

Making It Memorable.

On Dolly's birthday she was presented with a baby bulldog, and her delight was delicious to behold.

It was very young, and she insisted upon taking it to bed with her, but the next morning she was looking very tired.

"Haven't you slept well, darling?" asked her mother.

"No, mummy," said Dolly. "Nelson was crying in the night for his mummy, so I kept awake with him for company, and I made awful faces all night to make him think I was his bulldog mummy to comfort him!"—Answers, London.

The officers elected follow: John Houston, president; Maybelle Leavitt, vice-president; Mildred Thrasher, secretary; Charles Collier, treasurer and manager and W. E. Marshall, member at large on the board of directors.

Plans for another meeting in the near future will be announced by the president after a session with the other officers.
