Prosperity Reigns On Pacific Coast

cent in the case of automobile tires to 52.3 per cent in the case of agricultural implements.

Having regard for the greater percentage of decline in wholesale than in retail prices, it is probably true that the physical volume of goods now moving at wholesale, with the exception of agricultural implements and perhaps stationery, is about the same as that of September, 1920, while the volume of retail movement is appreciably larger than it was a year ago.

The heavy marketing of grain observed in August has continued during the month of September. Receipts at seaboard cities in the Pacific Northwest thus far this season have been 114 per cent greater than those of the corresponding period of 1920. Activity in flour milling has increased substantially, 64 reporting mills now operating at 63 per cent of capacity compared with 43 per cent a month ago and 44 per cent in September 1920. Reporting mills assign as a reason for this activity an increase in both domestic and foreign demand for flour.

Other seasonal crops of this district now moving to market are apples from the Pacific Northwest, cotton from Arizona and Southern California, rice from Northern California, specialty fruits such as raisins, prunes, almonds and walnuts. The early maturity of the apple crop of the Pacific Northwest has permitted shipments so far this season 200 per cent greater in amount than those of last year to the same date, and at prices which have averaged approximately the same as those received in 1920. Cotton growers in the district have been particularly benefited by the recent increase in cotton prices, inasmuch as there has been no loss of crop due to the weevil, this pest not having infested the cotton growing areas of this district.

In California the substantial carry over of their 1920 crop, which a few months ago was disturbing the producers of raisins and prunes in California, is now reported to have been sold and demand for the new crops is steady at opening prices. Almonds and walnuts, of which commodities California grows over 90 per cent of the United States' production have been bought rapidly at opening prices and growers have now practically sold out.
