WHERE'S IT GOING?

The resumption of the campaign for the Near East is about due. Reverend Handsaker is home from a flying trip to Armenia, with tales of awful suffering among the people there and from other sources the public is being prepared for the annual touch. One of the professional relief workers is quoted as saying: "The last year of war fare has left but few Armenians alive, and most of the famine victims are women and children. Clothes are almost as scarce as food. Children and occasionally adult women walk the streets naked." If these statements are true some persons may begin to wonder what becomes of the hundreds of millions of dollars sent over there annually from America. Who is getting it? Evidently the Armenians are worse off than before they became the wards of our charitable people.—Eugene Guard.
