Ex-Soldier Finds Long Lost Pants

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., Oct. 24.—"These are my pants," exclaimed J. V. Dugovitch, snatching up a pair from a pile of reclaimed army breeches in a local drygoods store.
 "Only a dollar," informed the clerk.
 "But they're mine already, see!" Dugovitch turned back the waistband and displayed his name printed in more than one place with an indelible pencil. He had lost these pants, he explained, over five years ago when he was in the 315 cavalry stationed at Ft. Hill, Okla.
 They had been stolen, he said, together with his roll of $170, and a private suspected of the theft had been sentenced to serve three years as a result.
 Meanwhile Dugovitch had come to work in the Bakersfield oil fields, and had come to the store in search of a cheap pair of breeches.
 The manager of the store said the pants had come in a consignment direct from New York, but made Dugovitch a present of them.

Old Indian Feud Cause of Murders

EUREKA, Oct. 29.—An Indian feud dating back to the late seventies, and a result of one of the original bootlegging quarrels of the settlements, is said here to be the direct cause of two murders in the state.
 Both Marion Rube, Humbolt Indian, who in Red Bluff is accused of the murder of Oscar McArdie from ambush at Corning, and Lagoon George, another Indian, held for the slaying of Jimmy the Trimmer, are said to have inherited the quarrel from a feud of several generations.
 The trouble according to long-standing stories in the county, originated at the Snider trading post on the Klamath River at the time there were villages of Pec-Wan and Wah-tuk on the river near the post.
 A Pec-Wan lad, athirst for the illicit liquor of the white man, unable to obtain on account of his youth, engaged an older Wah-tuk Indian to get it for him, giving him the money for the purchase. But the Wah-tuk, whether or not he obtained the liquor, never delivered it, and also failed to return the money. The result was a quarrel in which the lad threatened the other's life with a gun, and caused the indignity of hasty flight to fall upon the noble village of Wah-tuk.

Revenge, not satisfied in punishing the boy for his assault, fell upon his father who was shot from ambush the next day.

Out of this incident grew the feud that has flourished for years among the Indians of the two villages, and is not dormant yet, according to authorities who investigated the recent killings.

French Soldiers Look to U. S. To Win World Peace

PARIS, Oct. 29.—"I believe that is the great powers earnestly desire peace they can lay the foundations of it at Washington."

This is the statement made to the United Press by Charles Bertrand, Deputy of the Seine and president of the Inter-Allied Federation of War Veterans, representing 9,000,000 veterans, including the membership of the American Legion. Bertrand is also president of the Associated War Veteran Associations of France with a total membership of 2,000,000 members, and at the invitation of the American Legion will accompany Marshal Foch on his visit to the United States.

"France has maintained her military organization," said Bertrand, "because Germany has not fulfilled all her obligations, and because it is the only weapon which France possesses to make Germany pay. We cannot disband our army without future guarantees. The tide of invasion in Europe has always swept westward and it is always against France as the western outpost of Europe that the breakers have crashed."

"An understanding with England and the United States would make a recurrence of war impossible. I believe that France and Belgium could hold the Rhine against a new German aggression, if the United States and England would provision us."

"The essential condition to the maintenance of peace in Europe is the disarmament of Germany. After Germany has been disarmed, then we can consider what measures should be applied to keep order in Germany."

Baltimore Places Ban on Knickers

Baltimore business men may not be moor modest than those of other cities but they have risen as one against the movement among the working girls of Baltimore, who are planning to adopt knickerbockers as their business dress. The reason given for their opposition is that knickers on the girls would distract and would decrease their efficiency.
