the contract. While not absolutely insisted upon, the proprietors asked for seven days a week work. The cooking part of the contract was not objected to so much as the waiters and dishwashers wages and the forced relief clause, the proprietors said.

A statement was issued this noon, prior to a meeting of the Culinary Union executive committee this afternoon, in which Secretary McMillan said: "We have used every endeavor for a conciliation. After the adjourned conference Monday afternoon, to await the decision of the proprietors organization, Mr. Nickerson, on behalf of the Proprietor's Association in a conference arranged with the president and secretary of our organization, rejected the re-submission of our wage scale which included the 7 per cent cut, and submitted to us a counter wage scale with further reductions."

"The president of the culinary alliance, in conjunction with the secretary, argued two hours pro and con, asking Mr. Nickerson if he could not see his way clear to further reconsider the wage scale. Personally, (Mr. Nickerson) was willing but was bound by the association views and stand. The rejection was final. We asked then "if another conference would bring us closer together and he made a negative reply."

"The action taken by the entire membership body of the culinary alliance, following this was unanimous rejection of the counter scale, as our contract had expired November 1, and we were bound no further. The secretary was instructed to withdraw the union house cards and notify the proprietors that their culinary employees could not work further under their conditions."

Seeking Skeleton of Perfect Dinosaur

SPokane, Wash., Nov. 2. — Hope that they may obtain for the museum of the Eastern Washington Historical society here an almost perfect specimen of a dinosaur skeleton is expressed by officials of the society here following the offer by Colonel D. Crockett, of Corvallis, Mont., of a huge skeleton which he recently discovered north of that town.

The skeleton, which was found on a hillside near the Canadian border, with a portion of the immense head and forelegs protruding, is declared to be in a perfect state of preservation. Colonel Crockett estimated that it would be found to be more than 100 feet in length upon excavation. There appear to be several smaller skeletons in the vicinity, he stated.

E. A. Lindsley, a member of the board of directors of the museum has replied that arrangements will be made at once for the investigation of the find with a view to its later excavation. The museum is making plans at present for the excavation of a dinosaur skeleton recently discovered five miles south of Lewiston, Idaho, by Patrick Gibbons, a geologist.
