

SAW TRANSFER OF ALASKA BY RUSSIA TO U. S.

DANVILLE, Cal., Nov. 3.—Bruce W. Stone, a pioneer Danville farmer, is believed to be the only man alive today who witnessed the lowering of the Russian flag and the raising of the Stars and Stripes at Sitka, Alaska, when the American government took over the northern territory Oct. 18, 1867.

Stone was in the quartermaster's department of the army at the time and was lined up, with the other American soldiers and sailors to witness the affair. Two hundred and fifty Russian soldiers were also lined up for the affair.

"The day the flag was hoisted was bright and sunny," Stone said recently in describing the ceremony. "The parade ground at Sitka was on a plateau that was reached by a flight of about 300 steps cut into a hill overlooking the Pacific.

"The Russian flag was flying from a pole on the parade grounds and at a given signal a Russian soldier started to haul it down. As it was being lowered a catspaw of a breeze blew it around so that it got tangled around the staff and would not descend. The Russians got quite upset over the incident and several women and children were filled with all sorts of superstitious fear at the omen.

"The Russian officer in command turned to Colonel Davis, who was commanding the Americans, and asked him to suggest a means out of the difficulty. Davis turned to the naval officer in command and asked him to send up a man to loosen the flag. The captain ordered a sailor to shin up the mast and in a jiffy the bunting was clear. A moment later the American flag was bent into the halcyons and sped aloft, while all the ships in the harbor thundered out their salutes."

New Lucheonette and Alleys Opened

The Mutt and Jeff luncheonette, so called on account of the widely varied stature of the proprietors, T. C. Turner and T. N. Wiley, on Main street near Seventh, opened last evening at 6 o'clock, and drew a liberal patronage. The new place will serve light lunches, cold drinks and carry the usual lines of confectionery.

It is operated in connection with the Stevens and Reiness bowling alley, which also opened last evening. The alleys are in good condition and will be appreciated by many who are fond of this form of exercise.

"We are going to enter to the best class of trade," said Mr. Turner, "and both the confectionery and alleys will be conducted for the benefit of ladies. There are many women in Klamath Falls who want to revive the skill that may be somewhat dulled by lack of practice, and many who wish to learn the game."

Mr. Stevens and Mr. Reiness have promises from a large number of ladies that they will make use of the alleys and they look for many interesting matches this winter.

Venison Tags Must Be Used Says Warden

Henry Stout, game warden, announced today that all people who have killed deer this year and desire to keep their venison legally and free from seizure, must secure metal tags from him and apply them to each quarter of the carcass. A number have already conformed to the law and have secured their tags but for the ones who killed their first deer this year and who still have meat left, the metal tags must be placed on the meat with no evasion or failure as the law provides penalties.

Persons desiring metal tags can secure them by applying in person to Mr. Stout or can secure them by sending their name and address in a stamped envelope or by enclosing postage to cover cost of mailing. Klamath Falls Postoffice box 55 will reach Mr. Stout.
