100 Million Young Salmon Liberated

TACOMA, Wa., Nov. 4.—Hatcheries in the Pacific Northwest this year sent into the Pacific Ocean approximately 100,000,000 salmon fry, or one fish for every man woman and child in the United States, according to estimates here.

Hatcheries are doing much to revitalize the fishing industry of the northwest, which has shown signs of depletion in the last few years. With the hatcheries work, laws to protect the salmon have been passed.

Fish experts, trying to save the industry, have studied the life story of the salmon and have used it as a basis for their methods. The hatch-eries, placed on streams which salmon enter to spawn, take eggs from the female salmon, hatch them and turn the small fish back into the streams.

When the salmon has reached the age of one year and has attained a length of from 4 to 14 inches, it heads for the open sea. For four years it feeds on the salmon banks, attains a weight of 25 pounds or more, and then through some instinct that never varies, heads straight back to the stream of its birth, there to reproduce its kind and die where it was born. This is true of every species except the "humpback" salmon, which has a life cycle of two years.

Man and strange umbrellas often go without saying.

Heroes of '61 Will Attend Ceremony At Arlington

TACOMA, Wa., Nov. 4.—Albert O'Connor, 77, and William Sickles, 78, Civil War veterans of the soldier's home at Orting, near here, will be among the holders of the Congressional Medal of Honor present at Arlington Cemetery on Armistice Day when the unknown American dead of the world war are honored.

O'Connor and Sickles served together in the "Iron Brigade" the Seventh Wisconsin Infantry and their citation for bravery compares with deeds of daring performed in the world war.

Their citation follows: "At the engagement of Gravelly Run, Virginia, March 31, 1865, Sergt. Bert O'Connor and Sergt. William Sickles were conspicuous for bravery in their rescue of Capt. W. L. Herwerth of the 91st New York, from nine of the enemy, three of whom they captured and the remainder of them they routed. Sergt. O'Connor on April 1 rushed in front of the line of battle to get the colors. He had five comrades, all of whom were killed, but alone and undaunted and upon his knees he killed an enemy captain with the butt of his musket held in one hand while in the other he took the colors."

Both men were wounded during the war. They served in the "Iron Brigade" from its first battle at 1861, to the crack of the last musket at Appomattox Courthouse, Virginia, April 9, 1865.

Bet your bottom dollar!

CHESTERFIELDS "satisfy" —fully and completely —like a long, cool drink "satisfies" when you're thirsty —but unlike anything you ever experienced in a cigarette before. A better flavor, yes; a more pleasing aroma, yes; but more than that, a rounded out "completeness" that is wholly satisfying.

That's how Chesterfields "satisfy." And the blend—that's why Chesterfields "satisfy." A blend of Turkish and of Burley and of the choicest of other fine home-grown tobaccos in a new combination!
