A special bill will be given, which will be for one purpose—to please the youngsters.

Ted White says that the children should come early—between 12 o'clock and 1 o'clock—because before the doors open a picture will be taken of the whole group.

ARTISTRY DISPLAYED IN MEAT MARKETS

An artist would not be likely to pick out a meat market as being peculiarly fitted for a decorative display, but a glance at the show windows of the Independent Market, at 1136 Main street, and the Lincoln Market, at Main and Third streets, would knock into smithereens all aesthetic rules on the subject of decorations.

Harvey Brown in the Independent Market has cleverly fashioned the semblance of a suckling pig out of lard, and a chicken from the same plastic material, while loins of pork and slabs of bacon have been used as frames for appropriate Christmas greetings.

Not less clever but not quite so elaborate is the work of Ray Dennis in the Lincoln Market. He has taken a couple of quarters of "baby beef" and so artistically have they been decorated it is really a pleasure to look at them, and quite naturally they carry a suggestion of toothsome-ness not often to be found in any meat display.
