LARGE QUANTITIES OF MEAT PRODUCED IN U. S. FORESTS

PORTLAND, Jan. 9.—Through its issuance of paid grazing permits to stockmen of Oregon and Washington the Forest Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture not only secures for the Government a considerable sum of money, but it transforms into a marketable product weeds and grass that would otherwise be lost. In addition grazing reduces the fire hazards in the forests by removing the annual growth which would otherwise mature and become highly inflammable and might mean the loss of valuable timber. This statement was made by E. N. Kavanagh, Chief of the office of Grazing for the North Pacific District of the Forest Service, in reviewing the results of the past grazing season.

"The National Forest resources are made use of by a great many different people," said Mr. Kavanagh. "A large number of stockmen depend on them for their summer range, many lumbermen look to the forests for their timber supply, water power is being developed more and more, and the summer camper considers the National Forests as his vacation land, and all these various uses of the National Forest must be harmonized by the Forest Service. The national forests are really large enough and are so diversified as to allow room for all of these apparently conflicting uses."

In one year, it is estimated, the 22 national forests of Oregon and Washington turn out approximately 5,000,000 pounds of lamb, and 4,000,000 pounds of mutton. Over 54,000,000 pounds of beef are annually produced in part on the National Forests of Oregon and Washington, and over 8,000,000 pounds of wool gets its first and most important growth while the sheep are on the National Forests. The 1,400,000 head of sheep and cattle that move into the forests every spring are drawn from a wide area of surrounding territory, and in the fall the lambs and older sheep move to the eastern markets, principally to Chicago, while the beef stock for the most part comes into

RECLAMATION WILL BE STUDIED FROM VARIOUS ANGLES

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—An intensive study of the whole subject of the reclamation of waste areas was begun here today by a special committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. It is the aim of the committee to work out a national plan for the reclamation of idle lands by irrigation, drainage, leakage and other methods.

The committee will go into the social, political and economic questions involved in the subject, giving special consideration to such questions as the drift of the population to the cities, the effect opening up new territory has upon industry, and the practicability of this method of providing lands for war veterans.

That there is great national interest in the subject is shown by the large number of petitions from all parts of the country, calling upon the National Chamber to make a complete investigation.

The committee will meet here today and tomorrow. Later it will hold other meetings. The committee will consider the reclamation bills before Congress and will devote its attention to the broad principles of the entire subject. At the conclusion of its investigation, the Committee will submit a report which can be made the basis for a referendum vote of the organizations within the Chamber's membership.

E. T. Meredith, former Secretary of Agriculture, of Des Moines, Iowa, is chairman of the committee. The other members are: Hugh P. Baker, Executive Secretary, American Paper and Pulp Association, New York; E. F. Blaine, Vice-President Seattle Chamber of Commerce, Seattle; Marshall N. Dana, Oregon Journal, Portland; Clyde C. Dawson, Attorney, Dawson & Wright, Denver; W. E. Guild, Treasurer, Finkbine Lumber Company, Jackson, Miss.; E. D. Holmes, President, Chamber of Commerce, Casper, Wyoming; Edwin L. Loddell, Edwin L. Loddell & Company, Investment Bankers, Chicago; Felix M. McWhirter, President, Peoples State Bank of Indianapolis, Indianapolis; Frederick H. Newell, Consulting Engineer, U. S. Reclamation Service, Washington; Walter Parker, General Manager, Association of Commerce, New Orleans; J. H. Ross, President, Exchange Supply company, Tampa; R. E. Shepherd, General Manager, Twin Falls, North side Land and Water company, Jerome, Idaho.
