MARKET REPORT IS SENT OVER NATION DAILY BY WIRELESS

WASHINGTON, D. C. Jan. 19 .-The wireless is now being used by State and Federal agencies to broadcast national and local agricultural market reports throughout virtually the entire country. Reports on the national markets are dispatched daily by the United States Department of Agriculture from wireless stations of the Post Office Department at Cincinnati, Omaha, Washington, North Platte, Nebr., Rock Springs, Wyo., Elko, Nev., and Reno, Nev. These reports are received by hundreds of mateur wireless operators. National market reports are also received by State bureaus of markets and saricultural colleges supplemented with local market reports, and relayed by wireless telegraphy and telephone to farmers, shipping associations, newspapers, banks and other agricul-

The St. Louis University at St. Mo., was perhaps the ifrst among educational institutions to broadcast market reports by wireless. These reports are received by bundreds of farmers, shipping associations, banks and other agricultural interests, and a telephone company in eastern Illinois which receives the reports telephones the news regularly to its 5,000 subscribers.

At Lincoln, Nebr., the University of Nebraska and the Nebraska Wesleyan University are co-operating in breadcasting crop and market reports furnished by the State bureau of markets. Both radio thisphone and telegraph are used. At Wisconsin the State department of markets broadcasts national and local market reports from the University of Wiswireless station at Madison. At Minneapolis, crop and market reports are broadcast from the University of Minnesota radio station. The Minnesota College of Agriculture has also assigned an extension representative to instruct the farmers in the use of wireless receiving apparatus. The College of Agriculture of Cornell University has assigned an expert for similar work, and to assist rural radio clubs that are being organized in New York.

A high-powered transmitting wireless telephone is being installed in the office of the Missouri State market burgau at Jefferson City, Mo., and By virtue of an execution duly issued out of the Circuit Court of the Count of the Circuit Court of the Count of the Circuit Count of t will be ready for disseminating markfiece, newspapers, chambers of com merce, county agricultural agenta banks, high schools, and co-operative marketing associations will be among the first to install receiving sets.

A most complete program in the dissemination of market reports by wireless is being planned by the State bureau of markets in Ohio a specially constructed radiophone transmitter of the most improved type being installed in the radio station of the University of Ohio for that purpose. The Texas markets and warehouse departments are also planning a market news service to radiophone to farmers, dealers, and shippers in Texas, arrangements being made to use the radio equipment of the University of Texas at Austin.

The first national market report to be broadcast by wireless anywhere in the world was sent out by the United States Department of Agriculture from the radio station of the United State, Bureau of Standards only a little over a year ago. The department soon demonstrated the practicability of utilizing the radio for disseminating market information, and rapid progress in expand ing the work has been made possible through the co-operation of State and Federal agencies. To make the American farmer the best informed farmer in the world is the aim of these agencies, and equal progress during the coming year will go far toward securing that result, say officials of the Federal department.
