NEWS OF INTEREST TO KLAMATH LUMBERMEN

Red River Company May Open Plant

ANDERSON, Jan. 23.—That the Red River Lumber Company intends to open its plant in Anderson as soon as malaria has been more thoroughly eradicated and sanitary conditions improved, was the understanding given to Mrs. W. H. Torrey by Vice President Walker of the company in San Francisco this week. According to a letter Mrs. Torrey, the presence of malaria here was given by Walker as being the only reason that has kept the lumber company from opening up in Anderson. Malaria has since been stamped out.

The fair committee wanted to buy some pipe from the Red River Lumber company, and Mrs. Torrey, being secretary of the committee, was sent to San Francisco to confer with Walker on this matter.

Recently S. G. Roycroft, chairman of the committee, received a announcement made by the complaint. letter from Mrs. Torrey, bringing the good news to Anderson. The letter stated that Walker was very anxious to learn all about Anderson, and asked many questions. Her letter, in part, says: "Walker does not want to sell the pipe, as his company expects to do something in Anderson if we can curtail the malaria. Walker said. This is the only thing that keeps us from opening up in Anderson."

U. S. BUREAU TELLS HOW BEST TO CARE FOR HOUSE FURNACE

WASHINGTON, D. C. Jan. 23.—Advice to operators of house-heating furnaces, who, under the keen urge of the chill blasts of January, have applied to the Bureau of Mines for a solution of difficulties experienced in caring for their fires over night, is given in a statement made by O. P. Hood, chief mechanical engineer of the bureau.

There are several ways of managing a furnace, as there are several ways of driving a horse, says Mr. Hood. The general principle is quite obvious, but that principle can be applied in different ways. In the process of combustion two quantities must be supplied—coal and air. The coal we pay for, the air we get for nothing, but the quantity of air required in weight is from twelve to twenty times as much as the quantity of coal required. If we had to pay for the air we would pay a great deal more attention to the supply of this necessary material.

Given a bed of coals that are red hot, the fire will burn just in proportion as air is fed through the fuel bed. The question of keeping a fire over night is one of having a bed of fuel large enough so that at least the center of it can keep red hot without being chilled by the cold side, of the furnace, or the cold ash pit below. If absolutely no air was fed through the fuel bed, in time the fire would go out because of loss of heat. The problem, then, is to feed just air enough through the fuel bed to maintain temperature. The ash pit of most furnaces leaks enough air so that if there was a considerable draft or suction above the fuel bed produced by the chimney, more air would leak into the ash pit and up through the fuel bed than enough to simply maintain the temperature. Too much air fed through the fire would burn up the coal and the fire would not keep. The problem, then, is to cut down the flow of air through the fuel bed. This can be done in numerous ways: one can put on a large amount of coal and cover the top with very fine coal, or even with ashes. This increases the resistance through the fuel bed, so that only a small amount of air flows. Another way, and a good way too, is to allow ashes to accumulate on the grate to add to the resistance of the flow of air. While this is a good way in mild weather it is not so good in severe weather, because one cannot get as much coal into the fire-box, and it is usually best to keep the fire box completely filled with coal even when the resistance through the fuel bed is increased, if the draft is maintained there is apt to be too much leakage through the ash pit and too vigorous a fire. By opening the check draft so that air can flow up the chimney without flowing through the fuel bed, the air passing through the fuel bed is greatly reduced. It makes little difference whether this is done by opening the check draft in the chimney, or done by opening the damper in the door, allowing the air to flow above the fuel bed. In the latter case, however, the air is drawn through the boiler and helps to cool off the boiler in addition to checking the flow of air through the fuel bed.

Detailed instructions regarding the economical operation of house-heating furnaces are given in certain publications, on the subject, which may be obtained on application to the Bureau of Mines, Washington, D. C.
