TO OUR READERS

BEGINNING Monday, following long established custom, The Evening Herald, offers during the month of April, a reduced rate to all annual subscribers. At the beginning of the year the management of the Herald changed, and under the new control a policy was adopted that had as its basic principle a square deal to all, with special privileges to none.

The results of the application of this policy, even in the short time that it has been on trial, have been highly satisfactory.

We are inspired with confidence, and we believe that during the coming year The Herald, in common with the community it serves, will make great advances; not alone in material prosperity, but along lines of moral betterment as well.

We want to see here in Klamath county a united community, consecrated to the protection and advancement of American ideals. We believe that each reader has the same high goal in view.

We have no doubt that from time to time we will disagree as to the methods to be pursued, but we sincerely believe that all residents of Klamath county are loyal to our one main purpose—the moral and material development of Klamath county.

Personally, and as an institution, we strive, and will continue to strive, and have made and will continue to make sacrifices in everything save moral principle, to secure a working program of harmonious endeavor that will lead to the accomplishment of the common purpose by the speediest route.

From this basic policy in the coming year, The Herald will not deviate, regardless of whether it brings material loss or gain, although we think we gauge the general sentiment correctly and expect no loss.

We call your attention to it now, as a matter of rightful knowledge that you are entitled to possess, because it is a policy that we ask you to endorse when you pay your subscription for the coming year.

We are proud of the past achievements of The Herald; and because of its firm standing as a community institution, we believe that it can exert a great helpful influence in the future.

Today The Herald is giving the community a news service second to none given by any paper in a city of the size on the coast. But we are not satisfied with merely following in the rut worn by others. We are daily building an organization that is consistently and constantly improving the paper's service, and within a year, as general business conditions improve and the community's prosperity advances, we expect to add features that will indisputably place The Herald in the front rank of the interior press, as befits its importance as the mouthpiece of a community, unexcelled in resources by any in the northwest, and the reflector of the best ideals of that community.

Radiograms

Radio Aids Firemen

Among those endeavoring to find wider uses for wireless are Assistant Fire Chief James E. Granger of Cleveland, Ohio, Chief Moran of the Hartford, Connecticut, fire department and Superintendent Garrett of the fire alarm signal department of Dallas, Texas.

Superintendent Garrett has a radio receiving set installed in his automobile, and by this means is kept informed of every fire alarm, no matter where he may be at the time.

Notwithstanding the wonderful development in radio work during the past few years, we may look forward during the next decade to applications in this field which will be truly marvelous.

Without doubt the most successful and brilliant social event of the season was the annual Elks' masquerade ball given at the Elks' temple on Wednesday night. Every imaginable thing was represented in the way of costumes from the Ku Klux Klan to a unique suit representing a bottle of moonshine. Great pains were taken by those on the entertainment committee to make the affair all that it should be and much praise is due them. Some of the costumes were very elaborate, many having sent to San Francisco for theirs. The dance lasted until a late hour.

Every Man Should Have Life Insurance

Especially if he is a married man with a wife and children dependent upon him for support. There are plenty of good old-line mutual companies, and one is about as good as another. Don't wait for the insurance agent to find you; go and see him. The man who is engaged in business enterprise of any kind, or has a family to support, cannot afford to put off for a single day the all-important matter of getting his life insured. If you haven't got the money to pay the premium, your banker will loan it to you, particularly if he already has money loaned to you.—adv. 11

INDIANS LAUGH AT FILM ACTOR

It isn't often that an Indian smiles—scarcely ever does he laugh, but a group of Indians in the Fort MacLeod district of Canada recently enjoyed a laugh that was probably the most boisterous in which they had ever indulged.

Irving Cummings, who plays the part of a gambler in "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," which comes to the Strand theatre Sunday, was the man who furnished the laugh. Cummings was dressed in the role of a frontier gambler, and he looked the part. One day, while out on "location," he came across a group of Indians. Recognizing his attire as that worn by sportsmen, and always keen for a game of chance, the Indians invited Cummings to "deal 'em up." Cummings had a spare hour, and wishing to oblige, sat in at the game. In a few minutes the Indians possessed every dollar that the actor had with him. They thought it was a good joke that amateurs could "clean out" a professional gambler. Then, when Cummings explained that he wasn't a gambler, but an actor, the Indians laughed louder than ever. A few hours later, when Cummings again passed them, on his way back to the hotel, the Indians were still laughing.

Cummings lost about $5. He says he is glad that it wasn't a larger amount. The Indians might have laughed themselves to death.
