THE RIGHT MAN

EASTERN Oregon is no dilettante's paradise. It is peopled by men and women who are familiar with the hard facts of life, equipped by their descent from a race of pioneers, many of them pioneers themselves, to get right down to the bottom of the business of living.

They naturally choose for leadership in governmental affairs, men of their own type, unafraid of hard work and not satisfied with superficial scratching in the theoretical field of political economy, men who have practical aims for the development of this vast eastern Oregon empire, and the practical intelligence whereby to achieve their aims.

Such a man, hard-headed, democratic, always on the job, is N. J. Sinnott, congressman from this district, who has announced his intention to again seek the republican nomination.

Nick Sinnott's record in Congress is one of untiring effort and accomplishment for his whole district, and especially have his labors borne fruit for Klamath county.

He has been indefatigable in his endeavor to secure practical aid for this county's development. To his acquaintance with men and methods is due the early reclamation of the Tule Lake lands, the rapid development of the Klamath irrigation project, the attention to Indian affairs that makes the Klamath tribe one of the most advanced and prosperous of the nation's aboriginal population.

By reason of his broad acquaintance with western problems, and his marked ability in discerning western needs, he is a member of a number of important committees, chief of which is the public lands committee, of which he is chairman.

At this time, when the whole eastern part of the state, and Klamath county particularly, stands upon the threshold of great development, to replace such an efficient servant with an untried man, would be unthinkable folly, the political suicide of an empire.

And, of course, there is no danger of such calamity, Nick Sinnott will be given the republican nomination at the May primary, if he never sets foot in this district, but we urge individuals not to let anything swerve them from their plain duty, the casting of their ballot so that their congressman may see, by the unanimous declaration of his entire constituency, that his service has the appreciation which his industry and zeal in the public service have earned.

A PLAIN ISSUE

(Medford Mail Tribune)
THE danger of the Ku Klux Klan must be apparent now to all sensible people in Southern Oregon, including, we hope, some of its members.

Two outrages have been committed in the past few weeks. The first near-hanging was officially condemned by officials of the Klan. Undoubtedly the second will be.

But this much is known. On two occasions groups of masked men have taken the law into their own hands, and jeopardized the lives of two local residents. In one case, at least, the death of the victim was averted by a narrow margin.

If these outrages were not committed by members of the Ku Klux Klan, then they were committed by some unknown individuals, masked and mistaken by the victims for the Ku Klux. That much is absolutely certain.

In either case the danger to the community is the same. If any group of citizens in this country are to be allowed to take the law into their own hands, then any other group may do likewise. If one group is to be placed above the law, then all may be placed above the law.

There can be no compromise in this sort of thing. Either this is to be a land of law and order, or a land of lawlessness and bolshevism. Either we are to continue to support our laws, our peace officers and our courts and depend upon them, or we are going to return to the jungle and call in the gunman, the undertaker, and let the devil take the hindmost.

Our entire framework of civilization is based upon equality before the law. If it is right for a "leading citizen" to take the law into his own hands, then it is right for Emma Goldman or Big Bill Haywood. The issue is plain. It is as old as civilization,—the issue between law and lawlessness.

pany has purchased a 320-acre farm

The death of Mrs. W. C. Dalton prize for the best trimmed hat, the hat belonging to Miss Helen Brown.

W. F. Jinnette won the consolation is a run of them at present and everybody can have all they want. Some put them up in various ways for fuday fishing at the new dam, but everyday numbers of the Morrill people are getting them. These fish are considered by some to be excelled in flavor by no other kind of fish.

Falls Saturday.

Several bands of range sheep are being dipped at the M. L. Moore place
