MAY FOLLOW FALL

IN CASE of the resignation of Secretary Fall it may transpire that Hon. N. J. Sinnott may succeed him, says the Blue Mountain Eagle. This would be a most acceptable appointment so far as the west is concerned, and it would be a loss too for Eastern Oregon. Sinnott is a mighty popular man, and this popularity is based upon his efforts which are always for those whom he represents. When any district in Eastern Oregon wants anything attended to at Washington they "Send it to Sinnott."

BANKS AND ADS

THE banker furnishes, in one way or another, a large part of the money with which business is conducted. Having lent money to be used in a business venture, he keeps a keen eye on the progress of that venture and on the growing or decreasing value of its assets. A man who advances the money for the plow and the fertilizer and the seed and the live-stock, to be repaid from the proceeds of the crops, is naturally interested in the growth of the corn and the wheat.

"THE PERFECT LOVER" MOST FASCINATING PICTURE, STRAND

An opportunity that the screen public has been long waiting for will be offered at the Strand theatre tonight when Eugene O'Brien will be seen in his Selznick Picture, "The Perfect Lover."

In this photoplay O'Brien does more than meet the expectations of the film world—he far surpasses them. Never has he been afforded a better opportunity to display his talents than as the poor but ambitious painter whose charms no woman can resist.

Mrs. Byfield, the wife of one of the nouveaux riches, is fascinated by the handsome and charming painter and decides to foster his work. She takes him to the city where he paints her portrait and soon he becomes the vogue among the society women. He is "the perfect lover"; they cannot resist his charms. And Eugene O'Brien is some lover.

You're not going to merely like this picture—you're going to love it. And you're not going to be satisfied with having seen it once. You'll want to see it again—and again. You'll want a repetition of those delightful thrills that are going to creep up and down your spine when Eugene O'Brien kisses one of the four leading women who play with him—and he can kiss. You know that Eugene certainly is "the perfect lover."

OPERATORS AND MEN TO MEET

are vitally interested in the outcome of this affair. They are the mothers and children and to them is owed the first consideration.

Sibbald declared he had noticed signs of unreasoning stubbornness on the part of certain operators, and evidences that among the workers there were a few purported leaders who seemed anxious to ruin any results gained by the board. He scored both factions in no uncertain terms. "For God's sake get together and settle it like men!" was his concluding plea.

Chairman Woodward then declared a recess to permit the workers to discuss the situation. The court room was cleared of all except the workers and J. K. Flynn, the operators representative on the board, and Otto Hartwig, the labor representative.

When the meeting resumed 20 minutes later, it was announced by Hartwig that a vote had been taken on the question of meeting in the mills or in a public hall which had resulted in a unanimous vote for the former. He stated that the workers had announced their intention of standing by the agreement of the afternoon. The announcement was greeted by a storm of applause.

A declaration favoring the eight-hour day, introduced by a number of loggers at this juncture, threatened to reopen the case through the statement it contained that all logging camps up to the time of the strike were operating on an eight-hour basis. When Chairman Woodward called for opposite views, Alfred D. Collier presented a list of the smaller concerns operating over eight hours. The discussion was ended when it was agreed to admit both statements in order to give the board opportunity to weigh the facts pro and con.

panies showing the business transacted, and profit or loss, during the year 1921 when the plants worked on an eight-hour basis. Woodward said it would be at least a week and possibly two, before the finding would be made. At that time a statement by the board will be placed on record with county clerk here where it may be inspected by the public.

Forty-one witnesses were called on behalf of the employees, and fourteen of the mill operators took the stand. Eleven official exhibits, covering wage schedules, published lumber rates, resolution and statements of the employees, and briefs by the operators, were included in the record. This does not include the further documentary information that the operators must yet furnish.

An interested spectator during the hearing was C. H. Gramm, state labor commissioner, who, although present at every session, did not enter into any of the discussions. With the exception of Otto Hartwig, all who were here attending the hearing departed this morning. Woodward will go direct to Portland, while Sibbald and Flynn will stop over at other points.

LIFE GUARDS MUST ATTEND STRICTLY TO BUSINESS NOW

LONG BEACH, Calif., April 13.—Life guards patrolling the beach here must henceforth attend strictly to business, according to a recent ruling of the local civic authorities.

The new code covers many phases of the life guard's department and includes "No Flirting," "attend strictly to business," "Be properly clothed in duck trousers and duck hats when not actually engaged in swimming duty," "Don't give swimming lessons" and "Don't pay attention to bathers except to enforce beach regulations and to rescue those in distress."

Life guards' bathing suits hereafter must extend one-third of the distance from the hip to the knee, with a skirt of the same length. They will be selected by civil service examination.

Pockets in Style

Pockets are "all the go" in the new spring Jersey dresses. They're just for style, you know, a small handy being the most you could put in them.

Wide Sleeves

Almost without exception the top-coats for the coming season show the wide Mandarin sleeve. Tweeds and homespun will be the most popular fabrics. Kasha cloth, because of its softness, v. it also be used.

new basket work of ribbons, interwoven by hand as a child weaves paper materials in kindergarten. Each intersection is held by a stitch and often by a tasseled tuft of silk. In contrasting shades, these basket work triangles have appeared on the cuffs of sleeves, or at the shoulder when the sleeve is short or to fill in a deep V neck. Often they are supplemented by a fringe of ribbon loops round the girl's or hem of a frock.
