FLEEING NEGRO CAPTURED NEAR KENO BY POSSE

Fugitive Surrenders After Firing Three Shots at W. D. Satterlee

Surrounded by an armed posse, William Lewis, wanted in connection with the murder Monday night of George J. Nichols, was captured late yesterday afternoon on the McCullum ranch about six miles south of Keno after he had shot three times at and slightly wounded W. D. Satterlee, 524 High street, a member of the posse.

When word was received by the sheriff's office yesterday afternoon that Lewis had been seen near Keno, a posse was hastily organized. A number of Keno ranchers joined in the chase, bringing the number up to about 12. A party headed by Sheriff Low went down toward Chase's station, while the others, headed by Deputy Sheriff Barnes, sought the fugitive south of Keno.

Satterlee acted as tracker, leading the posse unerringly until Lewis fired three shots at him from a clump of bushes 40 feet away. When Satterlee attempted to return the fire his shotgun jammed. He then tried to close in on Lewis, but stumbled and fell, while Lewis ran out into a field.

An element of humor as well as of daring entered into the chase at this point. George Heavin, of Keno, who with Tom Dixon had approached from another direction, carried a long stick, and holding it as a rifle he called for Lewis to surrender. Lewis promptly sat down in the mud and held his hands over his head. He still had six cartridges for his .22 calibre revolver and could have riddled Heavin, although it probably would have been at the cost of his own life.

Lewis was returned to the city jail here. He had little to say, speaking only when questioned. A heavy gash on his head was made by Nichols, he declared.

Among the posse were Sheriff Low, Deputy Sheriff Barnes, Tom Dixon, road supervisor; George Heavin, Keno rancher; L. E. Sullivan, proprietor of "Bully's" taxi; one of the Pickett brothers; Tom McCormick, Keno rancher and four or five Keno residents whose names were not learned.

Satterlee was slightly wounded on one leg, he told a member of the sheriff's office today.

A coroner's jury yesterday afternoon found that George J. Nichols met his death by a gun shot wound from the hands of one William Lewis, colored, and accused Lewis of a crime. The taking of testimony took nearly two hours, seven witnesses being called.

Testimony of eye witnesses was to the effect that Nichols had come over to the house of Dolly Watson, where Lewis' wife had taken refuge because she feared harm at the hands of her husband, and asked the women what the trouble was. Lewis' wife told him that her husband had threatened to kill her and that he had a gun in his hand. While Nichols was still talking with the women, Lewis threw a trunk and other personal effects of his wife out of the back door of the Lewis home. Nichols seeing this was said to have declared: "I won't stand for that, nobody in my houses can do that." And in spite of the remonstrances of the two women he went out to where Lewis was on the back porch. One shot was fired and the two men grappled and rolled down the back steps together, another shot being fired as they rolled. As they reached the ground Lewis got up and stood over Nichols in a stooping position and fired a third shot.

Dolly and Lewis' wife then fled from the front door to the house, going in opposite directions. Lewis seeing them ran to the front of the house and fired three shots at Dolly as she ran. She stated that she only heard one shot and that she fell down in or flight, but it was gathered from her rather disjointed statement that no time was lost in reaching the Maxwell residence where she was given refuge.

Lewis' wife sought the protection of J. B. Autin, who had stepped out to see what the trouble was. Autin stated that he saw Lewis fire three shots, but at the time he didn't know whether it was at the woman coming

Here's Flapper Lingo Not Found in Webster

The flapper has not only changed the styles as to skirts and hair, but she has also changed it in the English language.

"I must blouse now to meet some tomato and lap some noodle juice and then for an egg harbor."

A strange language, you say. But adjust your wave length to the proper distance and hark to the "flapper" in conversation with the "shifter."

"A flapper," says Cosmo Hamilton, well-known author, is one with a jittery body and limousine mind. The "shifter" is a new species who flaunts as his banner "Something for nothing and then very little."

Between the two they have evolved a new language—unique in its terseness and slangy in its construction.

"Blouse" in the "flapper" code is "to go," or "go." Tomato is more complex. A young woman shy of brains becomes known in the "flapper" or "shifter" set as a "tomato." "Lap" means to drink. "Noodle juice" when finally decoded becomes mere plain, ordinary tea. "Egg harbor"—here the shifters and flappers have excelled themselves—turns out to be a free dance.

So that exudation "I must blouse to meet some tomato and lap some noodle juice and then for an egg harbor" to the initiated means "I must go to meet some girl and drink some tea and then for a free dance."

Simple enough. But the sweet, young thing with bobbed hair and skirts to her knees and mannish hat at a rakish angle, says:

"I gotta date with some slat who, dearie, probably will be a flatwheeler. He's going to grubstake me to a nose-baggery, but if he's a snugglepup I'll soon find out."

"Now what?" you explain in dismay.

"Slat" to the flapper is the male of the species. "Flatwheeler" is her characterization of a "slat" shy of funds who takes his lady friends to free affairs. "Grubstake" is to treat or invite. "Nose-baggery" is the "flapper" is what a restaurant is to the ordinary mortal. "Snugglepup" is a young man who is fond of petting and petting parties. And so the cryptic sentence clears to the average human.

For the edification of those not familiar with the flapper vernacular, following is part of their "lingo."

- Dimbox—A taxicab.
- Handcuff—Engagement ring.
- Anchor—Box of flowers.
- Clotheline—One who tells neighborhood secrets.
- Stale—Conversation that means nothing.
- Oilcan—An imposter.
- Boob tickler—Girl who has to entertain her father's customers from out of town.
- Ritz—Stuck up.
- Alarm clock—A chaperon.
- Crape hanger—Reformer.
- Cuddie cootie—Young man who takes a girl for a ride on a bus.
- Dud—A wall flower.
- Fire alarm—A divorced woman.
- Strike breaker—Young woman who goes with her friend's "steady" while there is a coolness.

T. A. MARTIN CLUB FORMED

Friends of Candidate for County Commissioner Organize

The candidacy of Charles J. Martin for county commissioner has brought forth a voluntary organization known as the "Charlie Martin Club," composed of 20 or more men who have grown from boyhood in close association with him, and between whom there has existed for the past 10 to 15 years the closest bonds of friendship.

The club is in no way a political organization, declare its members, as it is made up of both republicans and democrats, but it is simply a voluntary offer of support out of pure friendship. The members have learned, they say, from 15 years acquaintance that Charlie Martin is the type of man needed in public office.

"The vital need of Klamath county today," said one member of the club, "is less politics and more business in public affairs. We don't know how he stands on the court house question, neither do we know his attitude on the strike situation. And we don't care. We do know that his judgment is absolutely sound. Klamath county, along with many other communities, is overburdened with taxes and suffering from public extravagance and waste, and it is men like Charlie Martin who can pull us out of the hole if it can be done. We have had years of proof of his honesty, integrity and ability, and we're for him."

Among those in the club are: Will Houston, Chas. Roberts, Harry Ackley, John Ackley, Will Baldwin, Fred Houston, W. O. Smith, Carey Ramsay, Bert Withrow, Allen Sloan, Jack Kimball, Ed Dodge, Jim Wilson, Rob Baldwin, Chas. Baldwin, C. P. Mason, Leslie Rogers, Earl Whitlock and Austin Hayden.
