N. J. SINNOTT

Nick Sinnott Eastern Oregon has a real representative in congress, says the Bend Press.

In fact he is probably the strongest man in the house of representatives from this state.

Nick is not tied to conventions and the old order of things like his colleague Hawley, neither is he entangled in the meshes of political weaving like McArthur.

Sinnott stands on his own feet in the halls of congress and his voice is listened to with respect.

Sinnott serves Oregon well and the people of his district have faith and confidence in him.

To place another, an untried man, in the place he occupies, would be a mistake that his constituents are not going to make.

REAL LEADERSHIP

All courageous American citizens will honor Governor Ben W. Olcott for his firm stand against further encroachment of the Ku Klux Klan in Oregon.

The governor asks and is entitled to and no doubt will receive the support of every public officer and law-abiding citizen to prevent the further spread of this outlawed movement.

The Klan has boasted that it has a membership sufficient in this state to make itself a power in the coming election.

The Klan has sought to make racial distinctions and religious creeds an issue in Oregon politics. The fact is unquestionable. Politicians admit it and some politicians are counting upon the Klan's force being sufficiently strong to amount to a balance of power in the primary, and are trimming their political sails to get the benefit of the evil gust.

Governor Olcott's fearless defile to disrepute defiance of law and order shows that he estimates the Klan at its true worth and the intelligence of the majority of Oregon citizens rightly.

The boast of invisible power among the state electorate is squarely met. The Klan knows that if Olcott is re-elected it has a foe at the head of the state that will crush it.

Citizens who are against the Klan know that in Governor Olcott they have a leader who will keep Oregon free from the disgrace of outlawry. The issue is fairly joined. A vote for Olcott is a vote for the continuance of constitutional government and American principles.

A vote against Olcott is doubtful temporizing with a dangerous situation.

Letters from the People

ARE WE JUSTIFIED IN STRIKING?

The strike situation has been discussed from so many practical angles, but as a wife and mother let me bring another side of the question before the public.

I wonder if the people who signed the petition now in circulation are working for the good of Klamath Falls for today only or for the years to come?

In Friday's Evening Herald one of the paid advertisements stated that common labor constituted 50 per cent of the employees, so let us take them and threaten out their problems if such a thing could be possible. Under the new scale of work he was to receive $2.50 for nine hours work. Practically 5 cents was taken out of each day's wages for hospital fees.

Now let us say that his family consists of a wife and two children. First he must have a shelter for his family. He must rent or try to make payments on a home. Probably this will mean $20.00 a month, at the very least $15.00 or 50 cents a day. Then comes light, water and fuel. If they aspire to a bath so that they may keep clean and sanitary, it is an added expense. So much for overhead expenses, probably 35 cents a day, leaving $1.15 for the expenses. In these days of enlightenment mothers are taught that their children, up to a certain age, for the normal development of mind and body, require a quart of milk a day. Alright 20 cents more taken out of the treasury, leaving $1.50 and no cream for father's and mother's coffee.

Then for general health and development the children must have fruit and vegetables. The vegetables cost no less than 7 cents a bunch and most of them require something more in the preparation for the table. Fruits, strawberries at 20 cents a cup and oranges 70 cents a dozen are not to be thought of in these humble homes and, though their children require and crave fruit, yet mother must listen to them cry while every tear pierces her heart like a poisoned arrow. But they must do without for father must have meat or eggs to sustain his strength for the nine hours of hard work, for the smaller the pay the harder the work.

Then, of course, there are the staple groceries. Also the little feet go through the shoes so quickly, and father doesn't like to go to work looking so much like a beggar and mother would love to go to church if only in some way she could have enough money left over to buy a new ribbon for last summer's hat. But probably just when she sees her way clear for a few new clothes or some fresh window curtains why one of the little family falls ill and the surplus money goes for doctor and drug bills besides leaving a bill to be paid later.

People of Klamath Falls, this is a true history of the common laborer. Now what is the result?

They have a pride. They know that their children are of average looks and of average intelligence and they must go to school side by side with the children of skilled laborers, who have more advantages, with the children of the business men, who at least try to appear successfully, and with the children of those who have made good. Children, thank God, are unprejudiced and some one of those children takes the child of the common laborer into their home. They see better surroundings, such a vast difference, that he or she cannot help comparing notes. Here are comforts. This child's parents are not cross and ugly and she thinks of her own poor father, discouraged, cranky from overwork and mother, cross and irritable, from worry and trying to make ends meet but still fighting doggedly on for the musical and college education which her children are entitled to.

Education, so that her children will not lead in the same rut in which they have landed through the conditions which their parents fought, fought and failed.

And where does it end? Thank God it is not always the case but often it ends in the downfall of daughter. In the school days, in the homes of her friends, she learned the misery of discontent. No home to entertain the people with whom her intelligence and beauty qualify her. Mother's dreams of college and music never materialize. Is she wholly to blame if she drifts astray?

Ben also loses his education because, with the added expense of four grown people to clothe and feed, and father growing weaker from the long hours of toll and struggle, he must go to work and help at home and so, instead of adding a keen, bright boy to the ranks of professionals or business, another home of poverty is added to the city.

Are we making this fight for stubbornness or for ourselves alone? No, we are making it for our children and your children and the community which we stand for. And yet in our time of need, the ones whom we had a right to expect support have failed us. Have refused to take up the fight for the better labor and moral conditions. Why talk of competition and poor business? Why not give common decency and humanity its rights? With the class of people now in Klamath Falls no wonder we lead the state in immorality and debauchery.

Those who would turn down the ranks of laborers, fighting for a just cause, would certainly not uphold what is right and honorable if it interfered with their business. At last we will have to acknowledge that we deserve the publicity that we receive.

We have a few staunch people in our midst who realize that right is might and stand firm for the right and we must not forget to give them credit.

About the common laborer we left him with $1.55 in the family treasury and the great majority of his groceries still to purchase and all of the clothes and no pleasures mentioned. He may solve it if he can, it is too much for me.

Who will profit by the stand we've made?

Who will profit by these days so wild?

Who will reap the profit of the price we've paid?

Oh don't you know? Your child and my child.
