WORK

If you are poor—work.
If you are rich—continue to work.
If you are burdened with seemingly unfair responsibilities—work.
If you are happy—keep right on working. Idleness gives room for doubts and fears.
If disappointments come—work.
If sorrow overwhelms you and loved ones, seem not true—work.
If health is threatened—work.
When faith falters and reason fails—just work.
When dreams are shattered and hope seems dead—work. Work as if your life were in peril. It really is.
Whatever happens or matters—work.
Work faithfully—work with faith.
Work is the greatest material remedy available.
Work will cure both mental and physical afflictions—The Silent Partner.

BAN BILLBOARDS

THIS is the time of the year when men go forth with paste pot and poster, paint brush and paint to dab the scenery with signs extolling the virtues of patent medicines, chewing tobacco, ready-to-wear clothing and heaven knows what not.
Nature is most beautiful unadorned. To a crown a rugged hill with an advertisement of Parker's Pink Pills, fill a sylvan glade with a screaming tribute to the merits of Expectorator's Delight, is, to our way of thinking, not giving Nature an even break.

Klamath county has more scenic beauty to the square mile, probably, than any other portion of the west. Much of it is protected, through enclosure in government reserves, by federal restrictions upon the general exercise of the bill-poster's "art." But some beauty spots must depend for their unadorned preservation upon the power of public sentiment. We beseech the public to see that Nature gets a square deal.

Next to heaps of tin cans and rubbish scattered broadcast over the terrain, there is nothing less attractive to tourists than the lithographed landscapes left in the wake of the advertising brush brigade.

Klamath county in the next few years expects to get through much valuable publicity through the magnetic power of our scenic attractions. Thousands of tourists will enter the Crater Lake park by the Klamath gateway. Let's keep the natural beauty of the wilderness free from the billboard's blotch.

As billboard advertising is to some degree a competitor of newspaper display, we expect some people to seek a selfish reason behind this editorial. Newspapers, however, do not look upon the billboard as a dangerous competitor. Leaders in business are rejecting the billboard. The Philadelphia store of John Wanamaker, for instance, has a policy that absolutely forbids billboard advertising.

The Wanamaker policy is based on the theory that advertising does the most good when placed where people expect to find it; when it catches them in a mood receptive to its appeal.

According to Wanamaker's theory, the people do not seek out places of rare beauty to read advertising signs. They look for advertisement in the logical place to find them—the daily newspaper columns.

This outline of merchandising methods is thrown in merely to show lack of ulterior motive in defending the superb scenery of Klamath county from the vandalistic dauber. It is not a brief in the case of the newspaper vs. billboard but an appeal based on sound commercial grounds, as well as for the obvious aesthetic reasons.

Letters from the People

CORRESPONDENT SAYS EIGHT HOUR DAY WILL WIN

We so often hear of "love in a cottage," but, side by side, is the old maximum "when poverty flies in at the window, love flies at the door." Which are we to believe? Both, for there is a vast difference.

First, let us consider the love in a cottage: I believe that very few laborers really hope for wish for great wealth. If only they might have their little cottage in the suburbs of a city or town with father working for a comfortable wage and reasonable hours, usually eight, so that the wolf may be kept clear of the door and father not to be so tired that he is cross and impatient and scold the children unjustly. Surely every man has a right to both hope and wish for these things. Under these conditions we see humanity at its best. Father has a little time morning, and evenings to work in the garden or tend chickens, which ever way his inclination leads. Gladly he starts to his work, and for eight hours, he works for the very best interests of his employer. Not crossly or grudgingly but gladly and willingly, knowing that he is doing his bit for the world. And while he works, he often thinks of his wife and babies at home. Plenty to eat and pretty clothes to wear and mother happily planning the new rug for the living room, the dainty clothes for the children's wardrobe, the while she lays by a little each pay day for a piano or a violin for soon the children will be old enough to start in music.

Under these conditions the families are happily settled and the best citizens of the community, interested in public welfare for they expect to rear their family in this locality.

And now poverty comes in at the window.

But let oppression, in the form of low wages and long hours come and what do we find?

Humanity at its worst!

Gone are the days of settled happiness. Father no longer has time to work happily around the little home. Often the babies have gone to bed when he arrives home from his work. A slow resentment creeps into his heart and poisons his mind. He does not care whether he does an honest day's work or not. What is the use? He thinks of the faithful wife and mother, now looking so careworn while she watches her children grow thin for the want of proper food and clothes. All interest in the home is gone for it cannot always be kept fresh and pretty without a cent to spend on it.

And, at last, comes the call of the world. Out beyond—conditions are different. Down somewhere there is plenty of work and good wages. Farther north, living conditions are better, and so the little home is sold at a sacrifice, and they who have been, and who would have continued to have been loyal citizens move on to new fields and better conditions.

I wonder if the citizens who signed that nine hour petition, realized that

Gertrude's Millinery
Blouses Petticoats
The eBryn Mawr
A smart roll brim dipped at sides
With gros-grain band.

Personal Mention

when they wrote their name on that paper that they voted for the same conditions here which exist in the far south?

I wonder if they wish their stores filled with Mexicans, Negroes and Japanese. I wonder if these new schools and churches are being built for colored children of all races, while the clean, industrious citizens now walking the paths of this southern city of Oregon, move onto fields of greater opportunities where they may enjoy the peaceful homes which they aspire to.

These things are not going to pass for one reason, and one reason only and that one reason is that the men, now striking in Klamath County, are going to win their eight hour day. The timber and stave that made them faithful, skilled workmen who kept the wheels of industry rolling so successfully will also keep the fight for this just cause rolling successfully. And, ringing down the ages will be the eight hour day.

PEARL WOODARD.

Miss Edella McElrath of Underwood's drug store has returned from North Dakota where she visited her parents for over two months.

Mrs. R. Heber Radcliffe of Pine Ridge is here visiting her mother Mrs. Wm. C. Ball and attending Chautauqua.

Dr. Herbert Mallett has left for Lakeview, Oregon, and will open an office there for the summer. His wife and daughter will join him shortly.

MCKAY TELLS HOW HE STUCK TO HIS TRADE

Portland School Employee Declares He thought He Would Have To Give Up Until Tanlac Came To His Complete Relief.

"If it wasn't for Tanlac I believe I'd have to quit the painting business," and C. B. McKay, 3733 69th St., Portland, Ore., painter employed by the Portland School Board. "My stomach, kidneys and bladder troubled me a lot and my appetite was so bad I had to force myself to eat to keep going. My back hurt me so at times, I thought I could not continue work. I lost much weight and kept getting weaker.

"I used to think paint fumes increased my trouble, but anyway nothing did me any good until I took Tanlac. My appetite came back and I feel altogether a different man. I advise all painters who suffer to take Tanlac, for it is simply a wonderful medicine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The attention of property owners whose property is liable for improvement assessments under assessment rolls recently filed and now being published is called to the necessity of getting their applications signed and filed with the Police Judge promptly if the ten year method of payment of such assessments is to be taken advantage of. Applications for each piece of property liable have been prepared and it is only a matter of calling at the office of the Police Judge and signing up. Prompt attention to this matter will greatly facilitate getting the proposed street improvements underway.
