

IN THE COURT

Reed vs. Frakes
Order allowing each party to withdraw the documentary exhibits submitted at the time of trial was issued this morning by Judge Leavitt in the case of George G. Reed against Frank N. Frakes. The case was tried about a month ago, and involved the adjudication by the court of a trade in property by the respective parties, wherein Reed exchanged certain business property in New London, Wisconsin, for lots in Canal addition to Klamath Falls. Judge Stone decreed specific performance of the transaction.

Henderson vs. Bratton
On a showing that the case of H. W. Henderson against G. W. Bratton had been settled out of court, Judge Leavitt this morning entered an order of dismissal. Henderson sued for $1,050 on a promissory note which he alleged he purchased from the Klamath Packing company. He claimed the amount was due from Bratton of the Sanitary market.

Stone vs. Stone
Suit for divorce was filed yesterday by Ruben Stone against Lola Stone, in which the complaint charges desertion for more than one year prior to the time of filing the suit.

THE STAR
Dealing with a theory of mental phenomena that is declared to have electrified blasé audiences of the east, Marshall Neilan's latest production, "Go and Get It," comes to the Star theatre tonight only.
"Go and Get It" is a newspaper story in which an energetic team of reporters unearth a mystery of startling nature. Back of the entire mystery is the pertinent question of the day: Is the substitution of new human organs practicable so far as the prolongation of life is concerned?
The audience will be mystified and thrilled by the unusual events that line the path of the reporter who is told to "Go and Get It."
For "He My Wife," the Goldwyn release coming to the Star tonight, Max Linder has built a trick house with revolving walls, animated furniture, falling floors, and every conceivable mechanical twist that could be devised. In it a man may walk into a dining room, close his eyes for a mere second, and when he opens them he will be in an entirely different room—a bedroom, perhaps, or a kitchen.

THE LIBERTY
Rex Ingram, through his masterful production for Metro of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," established himself supreme among directors. A tremendous spectacle, envisaging the war as reflected through two continents, it overwhelmed with a superb sense of power.
In "The Conquering Power," his newest production, seen last night at the Liberty theatre, he works in an entirely different genre. Here we have an intensely intimate study of family life, a universal story of love and greed against the background of a French provincial town. The story has been adapted by June Mathis from Balzac's novel, "Eugenie Grandet," with swift-moving, masterful continuity.

THE STRAND
"Society Snobs," the latest Selznick picture which comes to the Strand theatre tonight, is said to be one of the frankest exposures of society as represented by the nouveau riche ever screened.
The Foresters have so recently risen from obscurity to riches, that Mother Forester wishes to hitch their social reins to a foreign nobleman through the marriage of her daughter Vivian, with the popular belief that a title is the solution of all smart set supremacy.
Her carefully laid plans, in spite of every safeguard, come to naught and her social aspirations tumble to earth amidst the amused, unsympathetic jeers of the social world. Then daughter takes the shaping of destiny into her own hands, and brings the story to a satisfactory close.

Conway Tearle in 'Society Snobs'

A romance of smart society with a theme as novel as it is original. This was their hour. A fleeting, blissful period of ecstasy, with the world and its social distinctions far away and forgotten. But as the sunshine is followed by the night, so did the creeping shadow of revelation slowly deepen. Could he reveal the truth and tell her he was only a—WAITER?
