S. P. HEAD SAYS DIVORCING OF ROADS IS MISTAKE

is that both these transactions are in violation of the Sherman act, although the Sherman act was not passed until 1890, which was five years after the Central Pacific was leased to the Southern Pacific.

Besides all this, there is sufficient evidence that the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific were held in common ownership as early as October 1870. The official records prove that the two have been under common control and management for 50 years, or since July 1872.

It is not a question of unmerging two roads separately built and developed, but afterwards put together under a merger plan of finance and control. The present instance is one in which there has been no merger, but on the contrary the roads have grown and developed, like a healthy tree, from a common root into a single unit of growth and service throughout half a century. This single unit can now be separated into two units only by a process of disintegration and tearing into confused remnants two railroads, neither of which can function of itself. Therein would lie a new and real restraint of trade. By the very nature and circumstance of their construction beginning with pioneer days neither the Southern Pacific nor Central Pacific can serve the public adequately and well when one is separated from the other.

Based upon an extended experience which began with these properties in 1882, I am persuaded that, regardless of my own, the great public interest is best served by recognizing that even a technical violation of the Sherman act is of small detriment to the public, when compared with the large and extended and convenient service given to that public, when compared with the large and extended and convenient service given to that public by the present railroad system of the Southern Pacific company, under existing regulative control. The commissions, state and federal, are endowed with all the powers necessary to make that control potent and complete; while in their discretion elastic enough not only to promote private investment for upbuilding the railroad service to the people, but also to promote private initiative that sound and progressive management may be encouraged in the general interest of all.

THE STAR

Betty Compson, Paramount star of "The Little Minister" and "The Green Temptation" and Tom Moore, famous for his romantic characterizations, is a new but welcome combination in Penrhyn Stanlaws' newest production, "Over the Border," which will be presented at the Star theatre tonight.

This story of the love of Sergeant Flaherty, of the "Royal Mounted," for Jen, winsome daughter of a bootlegging tavern-keeper, has many moments of high drama. Miss Compson misses none of its opportunities. Produced as a Paramount picture, superbly cast and filmed among mountain settings which thrill with their beauty, the creation is one that rightfully bears the hall-mark of excellence and reflects the greatest credit on all concerned in the production.

STRAND

Twelve reels of excellent feature pictures and comedies, one of the best bills ever shown at the Strand, will be the treat offered patrons again tonight. Betty Compson will appear in "The Devil's Trail," a stirring tale of the Northwest Mounted Police. This picture is replete with thrilling situations, supported by skilled actors, and alone is worth the admission charged. Mary Pickford's ex-husband, Owen Moore, will be shown in "A Divorce of Convenience." The work of this great favorite needs no praise. Two

THE LIBERTY
Hundreds of ex-service men were employed at Universal City, Cal., during the production of "Foolish Wives," the costly photodrama of Monte Carlo to be shown at the Liberty theatre tonight. They were used to give the proper soldier atmosphere at the famous Mediterranean pleasure resort, which also was a leave area of the allied armies during the winter following the armistice.
The American ex-service men included men and officers of all ranks from every branch of the army, navy and marine corps. A large percentage of these ex-fighters actually had visited Monte Carlo, either on leave or as hospital patients. They were able to help the picture considerably in reconstructing the life and activities of the Riviera shortly after the war.
