Humphrey vs. Sprague River Lumber Company

Attorneys for Ivan Lee Humphrey in the case of Humphrey against the Sprague River Lumber company filed their reply in which they seek to force the collection of attorney's fees. The merits of the case, which was a damage action of $15,150, were settled out of court by the State Industrial Accident commission, but without the knowledge of Humphrey's attorneys, and they now seek to collect their fees in the case.

THE LIBERTY

Henri Bernstein's greatest drama, "The Thief," which, translated into many languages, has been interpreted by the world's most celebrated actors, is to be seen as a motion picture at the Liberty theatre today only, with Pearl White as the star. It is the best thing Miss White has done since she left serial work and began to make feature-length picture for William Fox.

There is no doubt that Miss White has made good as a feature star. She has kept the enormous following she has had made in serials, and has won a large new circle of admirers. Her very first dramatic feature, Frank L. Packard's "The White Moll," revealed her talent as an emotional actress.

Her long experience in serials has been to her what stock experience is to the stage players. It not only has given her a wide public, but has made her a versatile and finished artist.

THE STAR

Prohibition and the arguments for and against it, stories of bootleggers and their apprehension and punishment, fill the newspapers. The liquor question is still one of the grave problems of the day. It affords many opportunities for dramatic treatment, and one of the best of these is disclosed in "Over the Border," the Penryhn Stanlows Paramount production featuring Betty Compton and Tom Moore, which opened at the Star theatre with signal success last night.

Betty Compton, as the daughter of the man who smuggles liquor in wholesale quantities across the United States-Canadian boundary line, and the sweetheart of a Royal Mounted policeman charged with enforcing the law, has a fine emotional role, while the part opposite her, that of a mounted policeman, is ably played by Tom Moore. The picture was taken in the mountains, amid the snows, and is pictorially very beautiful.

THE STRAND

Living a double life isn't any more strenuous than playing a double part on the stage or in a picture, particularly if the actor or actress have the gift of actually "living the part." The most successful attain screen fame only after having succeeded in stepping out of their own lives completely and living in the parts they play.

William Faversham, famed star of the spoken drama, will appear in "The Man Who Lost Himself," at the Strand theatre tonight. This is the first of a series of Selznick pictures in which Mr. Faversham will be starred.

"The Man Who Lost Himself" is an unusual picture in which it was necessary for Mr. Faversham to play two roles. Although taking the part of two men who were exact counterparts physically, he had to register two different personalities. "I am thankful," said Mr. Faversham, "that one character dropped out early in the play."
