UNITED PURPOSE

NEWSPAPERS all over Northern California yesterday carried a boasting editorial, unique in the annals of journalism. Unique for the reason that they all carried it, joining hands in support of progress.

Politically a part of Oregon but commercially a part of California.
Klamath should be able to find many lessons in the editorial. Wednesday's San Francisco Examiner carried it.
We are not going to republish it in full but we are going to reprint excerpts that we feel are applicable to Klamath county.

Take the foreword and read it carefully. It contains the reasons for California's progress while Oregon lags behind. In California the press, citizens and civic organizations met together for the general good. Religious and political disputes are quickly hushed upon. They hurt business. They keep settlers and investors away. Here's the introduction to the editorial, showing how the pull-together spirit is cultivated:

This editorial is being printed today in nearly every representative newspaper in Northern California. It is the first time you ever saw a large group of newspapers of otherwise diversified interests voice a common purpose in identical words.

It is presented in this unique fashion to excite your curiosity and cause you to read it whether editorials interest you or not. And when you read it we believe you will find it voices the aspiration of every resident of every community in which it is printed.

Its elemental purpose is to wake up Northern California. The moment is opportune for the people of this section to lay aside differences, drop family bickerings, banish municipal jealousies and stop town politics from clogging general progress.

Recognizing the necessity for immediate action, the press of San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, Ala-moda, San Jose, Stockton, Sacramento and other localities of this section are today setting an example by uniting in one big movement for the advancement of Northern California.

Regardless of politics, forgetting past differences, the newspapers are together in an effort to unite all the cities and towns in a common sentiment of good will, in a common effort to let the world know more about this finest section of California. In a common pull for more population and more development of our wonderful resources and opportunities. In a common boost, not for San Francisco or for Oakland or for any one city or town, but for all the cities and towns of Northern California.

Here's a whole sermon on community duty in a few more paragraphs. It applies to every community. It is easy to criticize, to let every one know that you are dissatisfied with the community program but what are you doing to better the program? Here's what California's recommend. Substitute Klamath county for Northern California to get the full weight of it:

You are wont to speak of community growth, so you must believe that your community is alive. Yes, there is a mind in your community. Your community, created by the pioneers, your fathers, and destined to outlive your children and your children's children, is informed with consciousness; it has an undying soul. What influence is today troubling that community soul? What important disquietude possesses that community consciousness? What thought is paramount in the mind of your community?

Briefly and bluntly answered, dissatisfaction. Dissatisfaction with what? Dissatisfaction with the neglect of community opportunities. Dissatisfaction with our easy-going Northern Californian ways. Dissatisfaction with the habitual indifference bred in the bone and blood of our too comfortable Northern California existence.

Your community and ours—all this gloriously favored part of California—has examined its conscience and found there many sins of omission. We have taken account of our stewardship and I cannot vouch for our honesty. Moved by an innate honesty quite as much as by an obvious self-interest, we have confessed that we buried the talents we should have used.

And because we are thus honest with ourselves, we are rewarded with the gift of dissatisfaction, a precious gift not bestowed upon the inert, the supine, the hopelessly self-satisfied. In other words, ours is a beneficent dissatisfaction.
In it there is the promise of community health; it is the augury of a community growth such as we have never known before.

We are dissatisfied with the rut that has bogged down the wheel of our forward movement. The lift out of the rut calls for a strong and steady pull, a pull all together.
Our dissatisfaction will do us substantial good only if we enor-gize the constructive impulse behind it.

A state founded upon such a spirit will go ahead. Such concerted action is unconquerable.

There is no copyright on the idea.
It can be worked in Klamath if the united will of Klamath county is behind it and it is the only way in which we will ever make progress.

SAYS CONTROL BY U. P.
WOULD MEAN NEW LINE

Pacific, Union Pacific, and thence to the Eastern markets.

Held Up by Long Lease

In order to remedy this condition he sought to purchase the Central Pacific. He was unable to do so, finding that the Central Pacific was controlled by a 999-year lease by the Southern Pacific. He then proceeded to acquire and did acquire the Southern Pacific company, and the discrimination then in vogue against the Union Pacific was stopped.

Union Pacific Development

"Immediately upon acquiring the Central Pacific, through the ownership of the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific proceeded to improve the lines of the Central Pacific. The great Lucin cut-off across the Great Salt Lake was constructed at a cost of many millions of dollars. A great amount of double tracking was put in and narrow gauge lines were widened and made standard, the little logging road of the Weed Lumber company was acquired and made a broad gauge line and extended northward through Klamath Falls, and another line was started at Natron, in Oregon, southward to Oak Ridge, the idea being to get a low grade line that would not exceed one and one-tenth per cent grade, so as to tap all that great lumber country in Northern California and Southern Oregon, and avoid the heavy and expensive haul over three and one-half percent grades crossing the Siskiyou mountains. All this work was stopped in 1912.

"The road from Fernley, in Nevada, to Westwood and Susanville, in California, was built, but the work of extending these lines was stopped when the Southern Pacific secured control. The Southern Pacific has a road into Klamath Falls now and why should it build the road from Susanville to Klamath Falls to compete with its other line? The Union Pacific never allows a line to be idle.

At the LIBERTY today In presenting "OVER THE HILL" for the consideration of my patrons, I am performing a task which affords me a delight wholly unalloyed. Will Carleton, upon whose poems this production is based, is known as the "Farm Poet." He sang of the homely things of life, the things with which you and I are intimately familiar. Nor has any poet ever revealed a keener knowledge of the inner workings of the hearts and minds of just Plain Folks. "Over the Hill" is a picture that will live as long as the homely virtues continue to exist. It will live as long as the love of a mother for her children. Dedicated to all the mothers and fathers in the world, it will do its share toward making the world a better place in which to live.
