Rev. Bristow is traveling by train and will stop at Eugene where he will join his wife who has been spending a short vacation there with relatives and friends. Together they will attend the convention at Turner.

The annual convention of the Christian church is held in a manner somewhat similar to the old fashioned camp meetings and during its nine days of activities over 3,000 different representatives of the Christian churches of Oregon will be there. There will also be national speakers and several foreign missionaries address the assembly.

Dr. G. A. Massey and family accompanied by the Misses Maggie Caldwell, Edith Young, Nina Lathrop and Gladys McCollum are also en route to Turner. The four young ladies who have been trained by Mrs. Massey are going at the request of the state superintendent to give several pantomime performances, such as they have given a number of times in Klamath Falls.

THE STAR

Through his long experience as a social worker in some of our largest cities, Leroy Scott, the author of the new Goldwyn underworld melodrama, "The Night Rose," now playing at the Star theatre, has presented a thrilling story which reveals the inner workings and the tremendous power that is wielded by criminal gangs. Most of the incidents are founded on actual happenings that have come to Mr. Scott's attention. He has studied the criminal mind at close range; and has been able to show the professional law-breaker as he really is.

LIBERTY—TOMORROW

Those who love dogs—and especially the furry fluffy dogs which are native to the polar regions—will be enormously pleased with "The Bottom of the World," the Sir Ernest Shackleton South Pole expedition picture which will open at the Liberty Tuesday. This Great expedition, which was one of the most completely outfitted of all expeditions that ever have started for polar regions, needed hundreds of dogs.

Four of the most interesting dogs in the picture are mere puppies born on board ship with the thermometer a long way below the zero mark. The progress of these baby dogs is traced until they grow big enough to take their places in the harness along with the parents.

LIBERTY—WEDNESDAY

The public little realizes the many hazardous risks that the actors are subjected to in filming a picture like "The Bootleggers." When running down the lawless rum smugglers an aeroplane was pressed into service and waiter Miller, who plays the part of Jack Seville, had to make an air flight for the rescue scene. The plane made a couple of circles to get up speed and then, for some unaccountable reason, it turned, while about one hundred feet in the air, nose downward, and made a spectacular dive into the water. Both Mr. Miller and the pilot had considerable trouble releasing themselves and were nearly drowned.

When the bootlegger ship sunk several members of the company had to dive into the icy water of the Atlantic, and their rescue was almost as thrilling as the picture itself. At the Liberty Wednesday.

THE STRAND

Mitchell Lewis, who will be remembered for his excellent work in "The Barrier" and several other strong mountain pictures, will appear in "Code of the Yukon" at the Strand theatre today. This picture is the story of Jean Dubois, a French Canadian prospector, who has discovered a gold mine. Jean is quietly storing away what dust he is able to wash each day in the hope that he will soon have enough to leave the northwoods on a long journey. He is anxious to start on his hunt for the man who wronged his sister. This is his main object in life.

Suddenly his calm is broken. A horde of gold seekers come to his part of the land. A village soon springs up. "Faro" Telford, a reformed gambler, whom Jean had befriended, is the cause. He has informed his friends that Jean has discovered a gold mine. A gang of mining crooks try to steal the mine. They persuade his wife to leave him. She runs away with one of the members of the gang. Jean is heart-broken but decides to leave the village and devote all his energy to discovering the man who wronged his sister.

This picture played to a packed house Sunday—see it tonight.

STRAND—TUESDAY

"The Golden Trail" the attraction at the Strand Tuesday is a thrilling drama of the far north. Jane Novak, the beautiful screen actress perhaps has never had a characterization that suited her charming personality more than that provided by "The Golden Trail."

The drama was staged by the American Lifeograph company of Portland, Oregon, and in it are shown some of the most beautiful mountain views that have ever appeared in any shadow drama.

The story of "The Golden Trail" was written by Louis Moomaw with a screen adaptation by Miss Elizabeth Mahoney.

The drama starts in with a small college town where Miss Novak is the idol and mascot of the football team. One of the features of the production is a splendidly fought football game which was staged especially for "The Golden Trail," by one of the Oregon Universities.

SHASTA VIEW

County Agent C. A. Henderson has been in the Malin section for the past few days working faithfully to get the best of the grasshoppers on the Tule lake lands. He is out before daybreak loading the poisoned mixture ready to scatter among the pests as soon as it is light enough and to a rancher this means he is awake and active as early as 2:30 a. m. these days. He has not had as much assistance as he should have had from those who have lake land under cultivation, but seems to be doing his part.

J. W. L. Smith and family left Saturday for Corvallis where Smith will take a special course along his line of work.

C. W. Bailey who has been suffering for several weeks with blood poisoning was taken to Klamath Falls Saturday by his brother J. L. Bailey where a physician lanced two places on his arm. He seems to be doing nicely at present.

H. E. Wilson and family spent Sunday at the home of G. W. Myers at their ranch home in California.

The Helping Hand ladies were entertained by Mrs. Myrtle Grayson Wednesday and will meet with Mrs. Maurice Harter Wednesday, July 12.

Chaslie Faught, one of our prosperous ranchers on the Tule Lake homesteads, went to Ashland last week and returned with a bride. We did not learn the lady's maiden name, but we trust to Charlie's good judgment to select a wife who will help make him a happy home, and they have the best wishes of neighbors and friends.

TIMBERWORKERS LOCAL 188

Men Wanted!
For service as railroad machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, electricians, sheet metal workers, pipe fitters, copper smiths, tanners, car inspectors, car repairers, helpers---all classes.
Under strike conditions best explained by Chairman Ben W. Hopper of the U. S. R. R. Labor Board, in his statement of July First reading as follows: "In the past a man who took up the work of another who was on strike against wages and working conditions was termed a scab or a strikebreaker, terms to which much opprobrium was attached. In the present situation created by the strike of shop craft workers men who assume the work of the strikers cannot justly be reproached with such epithets. This is not a customary strike in which the employer tries to impose upon the employee unjust wages and unreasonable working rules.
"In this case the conflict is not between the employer and the oppressed employees. The people of this country, through an act of congress signed by President Wilson established a tribunal to decide conditions which are submitted to it in a proper manner over such dispute. It is the decision of this tribunal against which the shop crafts are striking. Regardless of any question of the right of the men to strike the men who take strikers places are merely accepting wages and working conditions prescribed by a government tribunal and are performing a public service. They are not accepting the wages and working conditions which an employer is trying to impose. For this reason public sentiment and full government power will protect the men who remain in their positions and new men who may come in."
Adequate provisions have been made for the full protection of all new employees the same as old employees who have remained loyally at work. Applicants should apply to the office of the Superintendent at Portland Union Station, or to the Assistant Superintendent at Roseburg.
