WAKING UP

(Oregon Journal)
THE manager of the Klamath Chamber of Commerce has written to Mayor James Rolph of San Francisco the following letter:
 "May we ask that you remove the imaginary line separating Klamath county, Oregon, from California, and admit us to your concerted movement to bring before the world the advantages, opportunities and attractions of Superior California? California gets practically all of our business, and although we are not a physical part of you, we are with you in spirit and can visualize the results of the movement now being supported by public spirited citizens of all the territory north of the Tehachapi. More power to the movement."
 Some months ago a business men's excursion was conducted from Portland to Southern Oregon and to Klamath Falls. The Portlanders were compelled to travel via Weed, Cal., on their way to Klamath Falls, a distance of 527 miles, as compared with 434 miles from San Francisco to Klamath Falls.

They found that freight shipped from San Francisco is delivered in Klamath Falls two days to a week sooner than freight shipped from Portland. They found that passenger travel is about 12 hours less from San Francisco, that telegraph messages from Portland to Klamath Falls are routed through San Francisco and that San Francisco newspapers have the advantage of Portland newspapers in arriving in Klamath Falls after leaving the press. They found, too, that Klamath Falls is ranked as one of the largest freight producing stations in the state outside of Portland.

But every advantage was on the side of San Francisco in getting the business of Klamath county.
 Had the Natron cut-off been completed at the time of the Portland excursion the distance to Klamath Falls would have been reduced from 527 to 333 miles, a difference of nearly 200 miles. The time of travel, both of freight and passengers, would have been cut in two. Every other connection between the two points would have been proportionately reduced. The letter of the Klamath chamber of commerce, prompts a former Portland citizen, now resident in San Francisco, to explain:
 "Oregon, oh Oregon, how long are you going to stand by and see your wonderful opportunities remain undeveloped until your own communities want to join in the optimism and enthusiasm of coadjutors in adjoining states?"
 How long? In the case of Klamath Falls until the Natron cut-off is built. Until that event occurs a great portion of north Oregon will belong to this state in name only.

MINER UNEARTHS ANCIENT BONES

Prehistoric Relic Discovered in Northern Part Of British Columbia

EDMONTON, Alta. July 25.—In a valley of the far northern section of British Columbia, close to the Yukon border, which it is believed was never before visited by a white man, Frank Perry, mining engineer of Vancouver, has discovered the remains of mastodons that once roamed Northern Canada. The location of the valley is not marked on maps, but it is north and west of the headwaters of the Finlay river. Indians will not travel through the valley, believing it to be haunted by the giant animals whose bones they have seen.
 In addition to the bones there are footprints in the sandstone and shale of some other pre-historic monster; these are clearly defined marks showing that the maker of the tracks was a three-toed animal.
 The bones, which are of great size are not fossilized but are in a state of excellent preservation. Hip bones and sections of the spine were found by Perry, who believes that by excavation specimens of much historical value could be unearthed.
 Perry, a recent visitor here, spent 14 years in the far northern territory in the quest of minerals, two pack dogs being his companions. Neither man nor pack horses can be used to gain access to the district, where these remains were found, and so far the only manner of travelling has been to live on the game, using dogs to pack the camp equipment on their backs. It requires a year to make the journey in this way, but an airplane could cover the distance in a few days.

WIFE'S PLUCK AND SACRIFICE BRINGS SUCCESS TO AUTHOR

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS TEMPLE HOYNE

BY ROY GIBBONS
CHICAGO, July 25.—A wife's faith in her mate, her fortitude and unending self-sacrifice in the face of all adversity to bring her husband fame—that's the story behind the story of a new book that probably will net its author a fortune in royalties.
 Thomas Temple Hoyne wrote the book. "But Mrs. Hoyne published it, helping to operate a tiny job press between meal times.
 For three years she had tried to have regular publishers print the book. But they refused.
 The book "Speculation" attacks some of the popularisms of the day in the field of economics and politics.
 "It's too bold a mirroring of facts," Mrs. Hoyne says publishers told her.
 Hoyne himself became discouraged. He was willing to abandon his literary ambitions.
 But Mrs. Hoyne kept her courage, pawned her jewelry and other valuables and camped on the front door steps of the publishers' homes—without success.
 The going became harder. They moved into a one-room home, office and printing establishment.

P. S. Learns Game Laws He Also Gets Big Idea

Dear Ed: Well, Ed, I and the missus has been fishing again and whilst I will not take off my lid to no other county on earth when it comes to fishing I find it is a lot moar easy to catch the fish than it is to eat them if you are stopping at a hotel.
 Its like this, Ed, I and the missus hire a room at Eagle Ridge and get a boat and go fishing. We got us a boatload and as ktho hotel prop. can we have the fish cooked for supper. The prop says sure you first have got to attend to a few little formalities. Says I what do you mean and the prop says in the first place you have got to get a affidavit that you caught the fish and then a tag from the game warden to put on the fish befor he can be cooked.
 Well, what do you no about that, Ed, Says I, what do you mean, a affidavit. My missus hear will tell you I catch the fish and as for getting a tag from the game warden, why this fish is past taking any interest in any kid games like playing tag. The prop. says thats all right but its the law and no ones to blame but the lawyers.
 Well, you no me, Ed, how I am when I get soar. Says I, all right and I hops into my lizzie and beats it fore Klamath Falls and drags a J. P. away from his bed and board and gets the affidavit. Then I look up the game warden but he is over to Lakeview. Well, Ed, I am not to be daunted so I start for Lakeview which is only 100 (one hundred) miles and I have not gone over a few miles when I meat the game warden coming back. Says I, now hears the fish fork over the tag. He has a tag on him all right and says one scent please. I hand over a 10 (ten dollar) bill and he gets soar and says what do you think I am a bank or something.
 Well, Ed, the short and long of it is the g. w. can not bust the bill and I will not trust him with it and he will not trust me with the tag. He says its the law and I got to have my scent befor I break lose of a tag. So back we go to K. F. and all the stars is closed and no chanct to get the change. Then I get a idea and give the g. w. a check for one cent which he says he will take a chanct on if I let him hold my watch, which I do. The deed is done and I beat it back for Eagle Ridge to cook my fish.
 Well, Ed, you no how women is,

LINKVILLE IN YE OLDE TIMES

and if it was not that I got to have someone to do the work around home I would have beat it for Reno today. After all my trouble, Ed, which I took just to show people something, why the missus goes out in the kitchen and cooks the fish herself. The missus gives me the hoarse laugh and the way I got it the people around the hotel is also itching to get some funny stuff off there chests. But you no how I am, Ed, and these people better not get gay with a man of my stamp.
 Howsoever, Ed, I gets me a idcar out of it which ought to pay me enough jack for my troubles. My idcar is this, Ed, that I will get some tags printed which is just as good as the regular ones and when a bird wants a fish I say how much worth do you crave fish. Either he pays me fore a tag or no fish. Hows that for a darb, Ed, Ed? I get you a job doing the same at Rocky Point and we make a clean-up.
 Yrs. as befor
