

I. W. W. LEADER WOULD RESCUE MEN HELD HERE

Seeks Army of 100 to Come To Aid of Five "In Net Of Timber Barons"

"One hundred footloose rebels" are wanted by the I. W. W. to rescue five fellow workers who have fallen into the net of the timber barons of Klamath Falls. This is the plea set forth in the "Industrial Worker", the I. W. W. newspaper printed in Seattle, a copy of which reached this city.

The writer says their members are "languishing" in jail here with little chance to get a trial before October. He appeals to the "manhood of his brethren," asking, "or are we afraid that someone might slap us on the wrist?" The jail guards are accused for their "brutality" and for their "bestial action" in manhandling the prisoners.

The article follows:
"There are in Klamath five fellow workers, who have fallen into the net of the timber barons of that district, who are languishing in jail there with, as it seems, little chance to get a trial before October.

"While they are waiting for trial, they are denied all the rights and privileges to which, until they should be convicted, they are entitled under the constitution of the U. S. A. and the statutes of the state of Oregon. They have not been allowed to write and have not received mail sent to them.

"A package of eatables sent by the Seattle Prison Comfort club has never reached them.

"Fellow Worker Davis, who was almost killed when he was arrested, was for a long time kept isolated.

"If anyone wants to see them he must prove himself an I. W. W. and if he does he is pinched.

"This happened to Fellow Worker Wm. Burk, a 310 delegate, who tried to see the imprisoned fellow workers on the 18th of June, and who was immediately seized, thrown into the black hole and who is still kept separate or was at least on July 7th.

"On July 6th one of the guards without provocation manhandled Fellow Worker Burk with a heavy lock and several cuts and bruises testify to this bestial action.

"A watch chain belonging to one of the fellow workers, a fountain pen belonging to another, and a $20 bill have disappeared.

"The fellow workers are holding the fort bravely. Are we coming? If we are not, shame upon us!

"There is no use of less than 100 men going there. Are there 100 footloose rebels left in this Northwest who have any real manhood, or are we all afraid that someone might slap us on the wrist?"

"The writer is ready to take a leave of absence from his job and be the one to open the dance.

"If you are a man and mean business and can be ready for action by about August 8th, write to the stationery delegate, Box 421, Tacoma, Wash., but do not write unless you can be depended on.

"There is no possibility of getting direct statements from the prisoners. Probably if they could and did write us the facts, they would simply expose themselves to new brutalities.

"But the information, of which they have probably no inkling in there, has reached us from absolutely reliable sources and was made available by one of those so-called guardians of the peace boasting on the outside of their brutality.—(751143.)"

LEGION HEADS SCORE KU KLUX AT CONVENTION

No Religious Lines Drawn On Battlefield Speak- ers Point Out

THE DALLES, Ore., July 29.—Ku Klux Klan politics in the Legion was rapped hard by State Commander Lane Goodell in his opening address.
"I am going to touch on a subject that is very delicate, but it seems to me it should be touched on," he declared. "Some of our posts have been split possibly not openly, certainly underneath. Lifelong friends will not speak. We more or less look askance at each other wondering 'is he or isn't he?'"

"It strikes me as a terrible thing in our organization, an organization whose membership has the fellowship of service to our country.

"We had no religious lines, we had no lines of birth in the army. We did not have until about a year ago. Now we seem to have. I am sure it will not live.

"I know the legion will live."

Buddy Comes First

"To me my buddy means much more than someone who was not a buddy who happens to belong to the same church that I do and I cannot believe that a true Legionnaire would belong to any organization which would influence him to put his buddy of a different religion on the other side."

Long applause greeted this declaration.

At last night's banquet of the "Forty-and-Eight," Goodell declared: "There isn't any religious creed in our organization and there shouldn't be."

William Pollette, first state commander of the legion, also made a long speech against religious strife entering the organization.

No Religious Overtones

"We didn't ask any of our buddies who tramped through the mud with us, who battled alongside us over there, if they were Jews or Catholics or Protestants and the American Legion doesn't ask it now," he asserted.

Not since the last Indian war has The Dalles had such a wild time as it is enjoying now.

The fourth annual convention of the Oregon department of the Legion is very much in session.

FIGURES SHOWN TO BACK GAME BOARD CHARGES

Sportsmen Declare Exploitation Claim Is Upheld; Five Members Quit

Facts and figures purporting to show discrepancies in the annual report of the state game warden were presented at the meeting of the Klamath Sportsmen's association in the chamber of commerce last night. The meeting was marked by warm statements relating to the alleged incompetency of the state game commission. The resignation of the members retiring from the executive board was tendered and accepted after much discussion during which reconsideration of the move was urged.

The outstanding discrepancy, as stated by Secretary L. J. Dean, was that the annual report of the state game warden showed that 2,507,000 fish were hatched and 2,155,256 liberated in Klamath county during 1927, whereas the figures of Lloyd M. Tucker, hatchery superintendent for Klamath county, showed that 2,370,500 were hatched and 1,431,000 liberated, he said. This discrepancy, Dean asserted, did not include $13,000 which, he said, were a total loss due to having been liberated in a dirt pond while the egg sacks were still attached.

Incompetency Charged
Incompetency of commission employees was shown, Dean said, through unnecessary losses. As an example, he pointed out, 1,300,000 eggs were hatched at Spencer creek of which only $50,000 lived.

The members of the executive board in resigning said they were doing so for the good of the association, believing that other members would be better able to work in harmony with the game commission. They said they had no intention of resigning from the association and that full cooperation would be given their successors. No officers were appointed to fill the vacancies and H. P. Dow, vice-president, and Frank Evans, treasurer, neither of whom were present last night, will be the only officers remaining until an election is held.

Political Motive Denied

An unforeseen phase of the situation arose in the intimation of some present that politics might be playing a hand in the recent charges made by the retiring officers, indicating that their action might be taken as an attempt to discredit Governor Olcott, under whose direct control the game commission comes, and to aid the democratic nominee. This was denied today by Wm. McNeely, who declared that the sole aim was to better Klamath game conditions.

"We are not actuated by any other motive than to aid the county develop and conserve its game resources," said McNeely. "That has always been our purpose and shall

MRS. BURNS ARRESTED

Former Resident in Trouble Over Breakage of Fountain Bowl

Mrs. Mark L. Burns, the wife of a former Klamath Falls realtor who became an attorney and practiced a while in Dorris before he went to Sacramento, is in trouble in the California capital, according to the Sacramento Bee, over the breakage of a cast iron fountain bowl, a souvenir rescued by a neighbor from the wreck of the 1915 exposition tower of jewels.

A neighbor who kept chickens and rabbits used the alley at the Burns home for his feeding ground. The fountain was used as a receptacle for the feed. Mrs. Burns cleaned up her yard and called a junk dealer to take away scrap iron including the bowl.

In testing it to see whether it was cast iron or steel, the junk man used a hammer. The bowl broke. The neighbor claimed it was his property even if it was on the Burns place. So he had her arrested.

OLD LEDGE PROMISING

Siskiyou County Mine, Long Deserted, May Prove Bonanza

YREKA, Calif., July 29.—A ledge of ore deserted by R. D. Williams two years ago because he did not have any colors, may yet prove to be more valuable than any gold mine in Siskiyou county. Williams was prospecting in the vicinity of the McKean property near Callahan when he uncovered a 30-foot ledge of ore of a peculiar character.

There being no trace of gold in the ore he did not pay much attention to the property until about a month ago, when curiosity as to the base of the ore got the best of him and he sent a specimen to an assayer at San Francisco.

The assayer reported that the metal reduced from the ore was almost pure tin. An average sample taken across the 30-foot ledge yielded a metal 75 per cent of which was tin.

If the ledge can be traced to any distance, and it appears to extend quite a ways, and the deposit holds up like the face of the ledge, Williams has uncovered a fortune and Callahan has a prosperous future in store.
