Did Her Best

"Please, ma'am, I've broken something," said Jane.

"Well, Jane, what is it?" asked the mistress.

"I'm very sorry, I couldn't help it," said Jane crying.

"Don't be silly, Jane; tell me what it is," asked the other.

"Oh, ma'am, the cucumber was crooked and seeing you had company, I tried to bend it straight."

POSTAGE STAMP DESIGN UPHOLD

Assistant Postmaster Replies to Criticism, Purpose Explained

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—W. Irving Glover, third assistant postmaster general, replied today to criticisms reported in some quarters to the proposed changes in designs of postage stamps which the postmaster general now has under consideration.

Glover in a formal statement said the impression seems to prevail that the new issue of stamps was proposed because of a desire of stamp collectors for new designs, when on the contrary changes were under consideration in the designs entirely because the best interests of the service warrant it.

"In response to appeals of the postmaster general for suggestions for the betterment of the postal service, thousands of letters suggesting a new issue of postage stamps have been received from employees of the postal service, who have pointed out the advisability of a more distinct variation in designs for postage stamps, as well as colors that do not possess striking similarity," he said.

"The department knows that thousands of dollars in revenue are lost yearly in the postal service, due to striking similarity in stamps, as well as a little deviation in color, which prevents postal employees from detecting short paid matter. This liability to error is increased by cancellation which often obliterates the numeral on the stamps to such an extent that errors cannot be detected promptly. In fact, the present issue bears so many features like that errors now made in handling mail with these stamps attached are in the majority of cases excusable. Particularly is this true in many of the larger post offices, where artificial light is necessarily being used, inasmuch as the stamps from one to seven cents denomination bear the portrait of Washington and the eight cents to 15 bear the portrait of Franklin, postal clerks cannot easily distinguish the denomination in the rapid handling of mail because of the lack of distinctive features."

Third Assistant Postmaster General Glover also said that the cost of preparation of the new special delivery stamp was very economical, the master die only costing the government $438.91, which was more than twice covered by sale of these stamps to stamp-collectors for which no service was rendered.

1,000 Children Are Arrested Each Year For Law Violations

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Approximately 1,000 children under 18 years of age are arrested in the United States each year for violations of federal laws, Secretary of Labor Davis announced today in making public a report dealing with the procedure of federal courts and delinquent children, prepared by the children's bureau.

The report presents the results of a study of methods of dealing with children who have violated postal and other federal laws. The post-office department and the department of justice assisted the labor department in its investigations by making available their records. The study showed 1,145 children arrested during a two year period for violating postal laws and 211 arrested for other federal offenses.

A measure authorizing federal probation, the report said was passed by congress in 1917 but was not signed by the president. A similar bill is pending in the present congress, and the proposed legislation, the report suggested, would enable the United States courts to deal much more effectively with children's cases. It was probable, the report pointed out, that the simplest, most practicable, and least expensive plan for the proper handling of children's cases involving violation of federal laws would be the development of a definite system of reference to state juvenile courts at least in certain types of cases.

MILLION BOXES OF APPLES FOR EUROPE

SEATTLE, Aug. 14.—Agreements have been made between the apple growers and the port of Seattle whereby one million boxes of this year's apple crop will move to American and foreign markets by steamers. Of the 1921 crop 375,000 boxes were shipped by boat and in 1919 only 2,000 boxes were handled over Seattle docks. The Washington state production of apples this year will be only a little less than last year when approximately a third of the commercial apples of the United States were grown in this state.

A surprising development in the apple industry is the rapid increase in the movement of this fruit on refrigerated boats. Until the last few years all the apples, peaches, strawberries and other fruits sent to outside markets moved on trains.

Chinese are gradually learning to eat American apples and last year imported 4,500 barrels. The government's fast express service in the Far East has resulted in several tons of lettuce, celery and vegetables going forward on every boat and the American garden produce is eagerly bought up despite transportation charges.

RUM RUNNERS' PROFITS HUGE

5,000 Gallons. Said to Be Landed in Sweden Every Day

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 14.—Legislation in Sweden against drunkenness and consequent heavy taxation on liquor and beer has resulted in very high prices for alcohol of every kind. So much so that smuggling of drink into Sweden has developed all along the coast, and it is asserted that about 5,000 gallons from the Baltic are landed and sold in Sweden every day.

Recently a German ship was said to be anchored outside territorial waters with a cargo of spirits for sale. In order to establish the truth of this alleged run-running, the correspondent of The Associated Press decided upon a personal investigation. With a friend he embarked on a six ton cutter for this German boat, which was expected off Sandham, and after a pleasant sail in the moonlight came up with the vessel which was riding at anchor with the usual lights showing.

On halting the vessel we were requested to go aboard and were received cordially by the captain. "Just waiting for somebody else," he said, "but you are very welcome anyhow." Asked down to the cabin, the visitors explained they were neither buyers of alcohol nor in the service of the customs, but only wanted to learn something first hand about selling spirits on the high seas.

The captain was a young German, about 30 years old. "You take me for a smuggler," he said, "or bootlegger out for business beyond the law, but you are quite mistaken. My name is Ludwig Wolff, formerly of the German navy. I do no business which cannot bear examination, and would not for anything in the world infringe on the privileges of Sweden. I am in international waters, and am entitled to trade here as much as I wish with anybody who wants to do business with me. quart. I have the best Danish schnaps for 3 krone a bottle, and many thousands bottles of German brandy."

Wolff, referring to himself, explained that he had been paid off from the navy when the armistice was declared, and on hearing of the liquor trade with Norway, he decided to join in. "I am not dealing for my own account," he said; "this business is organized in Hamburg by big capitalists. Liquor in Germany is very cheap and Scandinavian currency very big, so although we sell much cheaper than do registered dealers ashore, the profit for us is nearly 500 per cent." He added he expected to get rid of his present cargo within a week and return for more. He made ten trips last year to Norway, and with the same number to Sweden this year he expects to clean up enough for a five years' rest.
