TWADDLE

CHARLES HALL is running true to form. Animated by an overwhelming political ambition, he has been spurred on since the May primary to stage one ridiculous exhibition after another.

Defeated at every turn in his attempt to wrest the nomination from the regular nominee, he now threatens to bolt. He says he is under no obligations to support Governor O'cott, because democrats re-registered on election day as republicans.

Hence O'cott is a simulated republican candidate.

The republicans of the state know Charles Hall well enough by this time to esteem the ridiculous charge at its true worth.

It is highly flattering to the Oregon political system that its method of primary selection is in such a mess.

The republican party of Oregon, however, has its eyes open to the need of keeping the party lines clean cut and the election laws of the state will be remedied before another election year.

If the remedy takes the form of absolute abolition of the primary and return to a truly representative system, so much the better.

But the weakness of the primary system is neither here nor there as an argument for Hall. Had the shoe been on the other foot, how gladly would Charles Hall have accepted the situation.

Taking advantage of a technicality, for which the republican candidate or the party he represents are to blame no more than Charles Hall or the Ku Klux Klan, he finds an excuse to forswear his party allegiance and the pledge he took when he became a candidate—that he would not, if defeated, seek to be an independent candidate, that he would support the party nominee whichever that might be.

Charles Hall may lead a bolting faction, but it will make no difference in the result of the November election. He is not big enough to successfully split the republican ranks. He is too selfishly set on an immediate political place for Hall to make a combination with the democratic forces. As a factor in the fall campaign his influence will be negligible.

A republican victory is sure.

THE MEASURES

All the measures on the Oregon ballot passed at the November election—would the state be better or worse off than if they were not passed?

If they are passed it is certain that the tax bill will be largely increased. If they are not passed it is certain that the tax bill entailed by their passage would not be loaded onto the people.

Under these circumstances it is well to know exactly what one is voting for before sanctioning new measures increasing cost of government. Unless one knows exactly the results to follow, it is safer to vote no than to vote for any experiment at this time that will increase government overhead.

The future tax burden of the state is largely up to the people. If they vote it on themselves knowingly they should not complain when payments come due.

OVER 1,000 VISIT ANNUAL FLOWER SHOW; SPONSORS FEEL WELL REPAID FOR EFFORTS

Over 1,000 visitors attended Klamath Falls' second annual Flower Show Wednesday and Thursday of this week and the public-spirited women who devoted their days to making it a success feel fully repaid for all their work. All other social activities were neglected by societies' most active women in favor of the show. During the two days the show was in progress visitors were registered at the door by Mrs. T. C. Campbell and were served punch at a table presided over by Mrs. George Watt and daughter, Geraldine. In the evening of the first day Miss Marjorie Delzell, Maybelle Leavitt, Geraldine Watt, Margaret Worden and Eleanor Torrey met the Portland visitors at the door and presented each one of them with a Shasta daisy. The prizes were presented at this time by Mrs. Charles Wood Khorlein who made a delightful and charming spokesman. She also greeted the Portlanders and welcomed them in the name of the ladies auxiliary of the chamber of commerce.

Ladies who assisted as heads of committees were: Mesdames Eberlein, Harry Potts, R. E. Wright, Harry Aekley, George I. Wright, Fred Baker, H. R. Harriman. A Business Motive Power The time must come when all businesses will consider the advisability of advertising in the same spirit that a manufacturer ponders over the advisability of adopting a new machine. One does not install a piece of labor-saving mechanism because it suits his fancy; but because the efficiency of the business requires it. On the other hand, the man who looks to advertising to checkmate all weaknesses and shortcomings of his business and to carry it along to victory despite these, has a childlike faith in the miraculous. Advertising will not make his product or his service any better than they are; but it will bring him the full benefits of their merits. It will not eliminate wastefulness in his factory or his store; but it will reduce his cost to operate. It will not make illogical selling methods successful; but it will assist good selling methods, and often point the way for improving them. Advertising is the most inexpensive motive power that the manufacturer or merchant can buy today. It is a form of stimulus that brings excellent returns on the investment. He expects a new machine to reduce his cost to operate—perhaps to make a better product—and thus aid him in meeting competition and making larger profits. Advertising is exactly similar. The man who refuses to consider it as a possible expedient simply shuts his eyes on one of the problems of his business. He might as well ignore the banks as sources of credit when he has need to borrow capital. THE EVENING HERALD "COVERS THE KLAMATH FIELD"
